Hurricane Cuts Brunswick Off

Brunswick, Ga., and Charleston, S. C., groped in darkness last night as a lashing hurricane, which caused two deaths in Miami and an estimated $20,000,000 damage to Florida's citrus crop, skirted up the coast toward Cape Hatteras, N. C.

STORM'S WRATH

Beautiful Orlando Now Pile of Debris

ORLANDO, Fla., Oct. 19.—(INS)—Orlando, often called the City Beautiful, was a city strewn with debris, broken windows and wrecked and damaged houses to night as work crews set about the task of bringing order after a tropical hurricane roared through the area today.

The city, with practically all of its electric power gone, was a city of lamps tonight. Kerosene lamps, gasoline lamps and candles, blinking weakly from windows and in the streets, lent a weird effect to the wrecked landscape.

The storm seemed to have centered its fury on Orlando, where winds of nearly 100 miles per hour, unroofed homes and wrecked business houses.

Hundreds of tall pine trees, stripped of their limbs, looked like ghostly fingers pointing skyward, and stately palms, the city of a thousand trees, were torn from their roots and scattered over streets and houses.

The business section of the city was almost a complete wreck. Not a single store along Orange street, center of this city of 30,000 persons, was untouched. High neon signs were ripped from their bases and smashed into the street. Glass show windows were shattered, and roofs of other stores hung at crazy angles as though some giant had gone suddenly berserk.

Liquor Store Holdup

An unidentified white man early last night entered the Allied Liquor Store at 379-B Spring street, N. W., drew a pistol and forced the manager, E. H. Lipman, 54, of 1015 Piedmont avenue, N. E., to lie down on the floor, rifled the cash register of $200, fled, according to police, who have no clue to his identity.

Nazis Dread Blitz From Holland

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 20.—(P). Canadian troops accelerated their drive against Germans pocketed in the Schelde estuary of Holland yesterday, one column bursting forward three miles, and last night the Berlin radio blurted out fresh speculation on the imminence of an all-out Allied assault across the Dutch-German frontier.

Late reports said the Canadians were fighting inside Breskens, just across the estuary from flooded Walcheren island, while another Canadian column splashed through the marshes three miles to within one mile of Oostburg, squarely in the center of the pocket.

This action was part of the determined effort to clear away German forces blocking the Schelde river leading to Antwerp and German military spokesmen have repeatedly maintained that a British American "knockout blow" would be attempted somewhere between Aachen and Arnhem as soon as the Antwerp supply channel was opened to Gen. Eisenhower.

ROTTERDAM LANDING? But German broadcasts last night said Eisenhower might not even wait for the Belgian port to become available before launching a new assault. One propagandist even predicted a new seaborne invasion in the vicinity of Rotterdam.

The Canadians were making steady progress, but in some cases meeting desperate opposition. German troops counterattacked fiercely against Lt. Gen. H. D. Crerar's units on the three-mile wide strip of land stretching out to Walcheren and front dispatches said some of the enemy had won a foothold on the north edge of Woodrecht.

British troops advancing southward from captured Venray ploughed 3 1/2 miles deeper into the German Maas (Meuse) river bridgehead in Holland yesterday and with a strong American force converged upon the key town of Amerika, astride one of the main railroads leading eastward into Germany's industrial northern Rhineland.

NO RESPIRE The Germans, given no respite after their costly defeat at Venray and faced with possible entrapment on the Maas west bank, began hastily retreating from strong positions northeast of Venray, and to the south and southwest fell back before powerful American and British drives. It was the eighth day of an Allied offensive to eliminate the German Maas salient and prepare the ground for a big smash into the northern Siegfried line.

The British drove to points approximately three miles north of Amerika, while American forces pushing steadily eastward from the Dierme area continued to roll across the Deurne canal. Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First Army in hand-to-hand house-to-house fighting through Aachen won control of more than half of the city, finding German resistance as stubborn and strong as it was on the first day of the siege of the big German center 11 days ago.

At the canal end of the western front Canadian troops now have penetrated into the key German port of Breskens on the south bank of the Schelde estuary. Other Canadians closed in on the town from the east, reaching an unnamed bay two miles away.

The rest of the front was relatively static on a day of continued bad weather, worst toward the south: Gen. Patton's American Third Army in eastern France was bogged in mud, the doughboys lying in many of the same trenches their fathers used in the first World War, while American and French troops in the Vosges foothills further to the south continued to hammer German counterattacks.

In this sector 650 German prisoners were taken yesterday. Capture of Amerika, wrote Associated Press Correspondent Ned Nordstrom from the front, would give the Allies control of a major road and the only railroad leading to Venlo, which has been made into a German stronghold.

WHEN NAZIS SURRENDER 'Germans Hang Back On Debt to God'

(This is the last of three articles by Ira Wolfert, North American Newspaper Alliance war correspondent who has just returned home, giving his impressions of the Allied advance to Germany since D-Day.)

Copyright, 1944, for The Constitution.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—In a letter to my eight-year-old son about three weeks ago from the outskirts of Aachen, I wrote: "This German army we are fighting in Germany now has been punched goofy and the only wonder about it is why it doesn't fall down."

This is an objective statement of the fact. At the time and in the place, it was very difficult to be objective about the fact, or for that matter about anything. The Germans were killing more of us each day there than at any time since the July fighting in the Normandy hedges. And death was especially hard to take there. The average man in combat learns to accustom himself to the knowledge first phrased by Shakespeare, that each man owes God a death, and he who pays this year is quit the next.

But when the Germans did not fight on the Seine and did not fight on the Marne and did not fight on the Albert canal, the end of the war came into sight and peace and home and life without mud, with tenderness, without the awful, endless nagging of fear came into sight and the feeling became general that any man who was killed now was paying his debt to God before it was due.

It was plain the Germans fighting in Germany felt this, too. The difference was that most of us lost our feeling of hesitation before death quickly. The familiar American habit of buckling down to get done a job that we see has to be done carried us past this feeling that if we were killed now we would be wasted. Most German soldiers, despite all the urging poured upon them by their homes around them, could not get past the feeling.

"Make every home a fortress; make every village a Stalingrad," demanded the Nazis and the generals of their soldiers. There was small response. A German general whom we took prisoner in the battle for the Siegfried line explained it to me: "Soldiers do not improve after five years of war."

Reds Pierce Prewar Germany

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(P)—A massive Red army, poised for two months at the East Prussian frontier, has invaded prewar Germany for the first time, smashing several miles into the Reich fortress and capturing the border town of Eydtkau, 37 miles from strategic Interburg in a still-rolling offensive, Berlin announced officially tonight.

The Russians were backed by 500 tanks and hundreds of big guns which laid down an overwhelming barrage. They possessed "unheard of numerical superiority," and were supported at both ends of a flaming 200-mile front by two other huge armies attacking on the northern and southern sides of the imperiled Junker homeland, Berlin said.

Moscow's communique was silent about the East Prussian front, where the Germans said the Russians had been attacking for three days, but the Soviet radio declared "the war has entered its final stage."

The broadcast bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor told of fresh Soviet gains in invaded Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

Belgrade, Yugoslav capital, was on the verge of being captured as the Russians and Marshal Tito's Partisans pressed the savagely resisting enemy back into a small part of the city.

Led by the brilliant 37-year-old Jewish-born expert, Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, troops of the Third White Russian army swept over Eydtkau, a half-mile across the Lithuanian border on the Kaunas-Konigsberg highway, crashing through the battlefronts and thrusting into the east in a steady drive toward Konigsberg, East Prussian capital 110 miles beyond.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(P)—A spiritual link between the armed forces and their families at home will be established for 33 days, from Thanksgiving through Christmas.

The medium for this bond will be 33 chapters in the Bible, selected by 100,000 ministers and 6,000 chaplains, as the reading most helpful in these days. Men on the battlefronts and those closest to them at home will be reading the same chapters daily.

The program for this extended and simultaneous reading is under the auspices of the American Bible Society, and two national sponsoring groups—a committee of laymen and one of denominational presiding officers.

More than 10,000,000 bookmarks listing the passages in the Bible are being distributed from store to store, as enclosures in pay envelopes, in business mail and in neighborhood visitations by churches.

Several large corporations have donated radio time for the promotion of the Bible reading, and a joint resolution has been introduced in congress, giving its support. A number of state governing will include it in their Thanksgiving messages.

Besides the bookmark folders, posters in public buildings and V-mail—for use primarily by families writing to members in overseas service—will carry the list of references to the daily reading. Chaplains will distribute the list overseas.

"By a more extended and simultaneous reading now by those in service and by those of us at home a spiritual bond, which knows no limits of distance will be created that will be full of meaning for millions of families and that will make a priceless contribution to their hope and faith," says the Bible society.

No one source of inspiration is better able to provide for our need than the Bible. We may well expect that if fresh attention be given to it now by the American people, there will flow into our national life purifying and tonic streams of moral purpose and faith that will count tremendously in the remaining months of the war and the perilous years that follow.

More than 30 major religious bodies are represented on the National Bible Reading Plan.

Landings Threaten Manila Stronghold

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS IN THE PHILIPPINES, Friday, Oct. 20.—(AP)—(By Army Radio Pool Broadcast)—Gen. MacArthur, making good his vow he would return to the Philippines, announced from those islands today his Navy and air-supported forces have invaded and secured expanding beachheads in the central Philippines.

"In a major amphibious operation, we have seized the eastern coast of Leyte island in the Philippines, 600 miles north of Manila and 2,500 miles from Milne bay (New Guinea)," a special communique dramatically proclaimed from the invasion scene.

Striking at a point where he is in position to quickly cut off the island of Luzon, on which Manila is situated, from Mindanao on the south, MacArthur poured supplies ashore in preparation for show-down battles with an estimated 225,000 Japanese under Field Marshal Juichi Terauchi.

The great moment to date in the Pacific war brought immediate acclaim of MacArthur's invasion forces by President Roosevelt in Washington.

"The whole American nation today exults at the news that the gallant men under your command have landed on Philippine soil," the President said.

On Leyte, a suitable air base island 300 miles southeast of Manila, the invaders secured Tacloban on the northeast end of the island "with small casualties," the communique reported.

Tokyo radio also reported landings at Cebu on the southern tip, and said earlier landings occurred at the entrance of Leyte gulf on Suluan island.

29 Jap Ships Sunk Or Smashed by Navy

U. S. Pacific fleet headquarters, Pearl Harbor, revealed last night that the Halsey-Mitcher carrier forces renewed their relentless attacks on the Manila area October 18, 17 and 18 and bagged an additional 99 airplanes, sank six ships and damaged 23.

These figures increased the destruction on the Japanese since October 9 through October 18 to 1,335 plus planes, 86 ships sunk and 127 ships damaged in the Ryukyus, Formosa and the Philippines.

In addition, 75 small craft were destroyed and 80 damaged.

Most important currently is the neutralization of Japanese airfields in the Philippines, particularly the Manila area.

All the vessels sunk or damaged were caught in the south harbor of Manila Bay, except one large tanker damaged in Mariveles Bay.

More than 50 bombers, MacArthur said, raked targets around Davao and Zamboanga Tuesday. Fighters returned Wednesday to his Cotabato, and the west-central coast of Mindanao.

This action, one of the heaviest reported recently on Mindanao, centered in a strategic area some 300 miles south of the Leyte gulf region where Tokyo radio said American forces landed on tiny Suluan island.

FDR Tells MacArthur 'We Exult'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (Friday).—(P)—President Roosevelt today messaged Gen. MacArthur that "the whole American nation today exults at the news that the gallant men under your command have landed on Philippine soil."

In a separate statement, Mr. Roosevelt said of the landings in the Philippines:

"We promised to return; we have returned."

"We have landed in the Philippines to redeem the pledge we made over two years ago when the last American troops surrendered on Corregidor after 5 months and 28 days of bitter resistance against overwhelming enemy strength," Mr. Roosevelt said, adding:

"Nowhere has the desire to avenge the comrades been stronger than among the forces of the Southwest Pacific. Leyte is another rung in the long ladder Gen. MacArthur's men have been climbing for two years."

Mr. Roosevelt said "Leyte is only a way station on the road to Japan."

THERE ARE 96 CANDLES ON THAT CAKE—That Spencer Malone, of 508 Chestnut street, N. W., is about to cut. Five generations of the venerable Atlanta family helped him celebrate his 96th anniversary, and joining in the cake-cutting were two of his great-grandchildren, Martha Ann Malone, eight, and Beverly Jean Sibley, six. Malone, born in Meriwether county October 19, 1848, hopes he will live to be 100.

Celebrates 96th Birthday: Five Generations Present

Ninety-six candles decorated the birthday cake which Spencer Malone, of 508 Chestnut street, N. W., shared with five generations of his family yesterday.

"I'd like to live to be 100," Malone wished, "just to see what it's like, but most of all I hope I'll live to see the end of this war and see the world free again."

Malone credits his long life and excellent health to good habits of living. He believes, however, that "it's against nature when a man lives as long as I have."

Indian Troops Take Tiddim

By The Associated Press.

The important northwest Burma town of Tiddim has been captured by Indian troops after an air attack which smashed Japanese defenses covering the northern approaches. Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced.

Fall of the base from which the Japanese launched their unsuccessful invasion of India early this year came after months of heavy fighting in the first determined Japanese stand in this theater since the action at Bishanpur, India, last spring.

Communique announcing the collapse of Tiddim asserted that the Allied forces were now in contact with the enemy south of Tiddim, along the Japanese escape route. Fate of the Japanese garrison was not reported immediately.

In China's Yunnan province, where Chinese and American forces are battling to reopen the Burma road as a supply line, the Chinese captured Yangkungyifen. The town is five miles south of Mangshih, on the road. The Chinese said they repulsed Japanese counterattacks at Yangkungyifen and four miles east of Mangshih.

American airmen continued to bomb Japanese positions and bridges along the Burma road.

Death Cuts Democrats In House to 214; Republicans Have 212

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(P)—Rep. Hampton P. Fulmer, 68-year-old Democratic chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and dean of the South Carolina delegation, died suddenly late today of a heart attack.

He had just stepped out of an elevator in the Methodist building annex, where he and Mrs. Fulmer had an apartment, when he stumbled. The operator went to his assistance and helped him into the apartment. Within a few minutes the congressman died.

Mrs. Fulmer was away at the time, but returned a short time later.

FALSE TEETH

That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plates dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just wear a little FASTTETH, the silencing (non-sed) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour, stain, or discolor (disturb breath). Get FASTTETH at any drug store.

HEIRESS

follow weekly, and safely, in Hollywood.

She left at 11:30 p. m., unescorted in accordance with the rules, and went home. There, like any hungry child, she opened a can of string beans and went to bed on a midnight snack.

All that is known from there on is that at 2:30 a. m., of Thursday morning, a male bachelor occupying an apartment in another building, was wakened out of a deep sleep by the screams of a woman.

"Stop! Stop! You're killing me!" "I was tired and lousy," he told police, "and my natural impression was that some man and his wife were fighting. Her screams stopped immediately and I fell back to sleep."

It was Thursday, late, that Georgette's battered body, clad only in her pajama tops, a towel stuffed half way down her throat, was found floating in a half-filled bathtub.

The tragedy of her death is that for a girl who did right, as she had been taught right, she came to such an inexcusable end.

Today, as police at all divisions—including the FBI—documented her past life in an effort to find a clue, some one little "forgotten" thing that might light the trail to her murderer, they found nothing except the precisely kept albums, scrapbooks, school papers and diaries that youth cherishes.

Of the hundreds of names of civilians (youths her own age) and servicemen that appeared in her private papers, no one could find, either in her own handwriting or her prized letters from her friends, one single note that was unhealthy.

It was "just all sunshine and light" insofar as Georgette was concerned. She wanted so very badly to be of some use.

She had friends by the hundreds, but the record shows that they were "friends," nothing more.

Just 20 months back, she obtained her father's permission to "make her own way in the world," but the record shows that they were "friends," nothing more.

During the period of her employment she was identified mostly by the lackadaisical precision with which she carried out her duties.

When the pasta pots had to be filled—ordinarily a 45-minute job—Georgette did it in two hours; but when she was through, it was well done, although Georgette might be filthy with pasta.

DIDN'T CARE FOR CLOTHES

She never said about her clothes, how they looked, nor her hair; and not for five of the six months she was employed by the Times did any one know that she was a woman of wealth or background. She kept it quiet and walked, as the head office boy expresses it, "stagnantly in a dream."

Once, she approached the star police reporter, and asked for the truth.

"Tell me," she said, "will I ever learn to be a reporter?"

"Maybe," said the reporter, now working with detectives to find her murderer, "you will—but not until you wait up."

The paradox of her lies in her generosity at home and her utter frugality at work. At the Times she never had any money. Many another office girl loaned her small sums, an incongruity now known to have been unnecessary.

It was a phobia, since come to light. She had been known to entertain lavishly—for servicemen—but she used to share the lunches of the other "office girls" on the Times.

ATE OFFICE GIRLS

For a while she ate off them. Then she brought her own lunch. It consisted of cold artichokes and imported anchovies, pate de foie gras and equally elegant tastes; and once, paradoxically, one of her closest girl friends attempted to switch one of the tastes as the two were having their lunch.

"Don't do that," Georgette warned her in a hurt little voice. "That's all I have for my lunch."

The thing she is most remembered for, however, around the cynical by-ways of the city room where she held her first job is

Hanky Hair-Do

Taboo at Girls' High

Sweet, young students of Girls' High school must present neatly coiffured heads and the practice of encasing rolled locks in unsightly handkerchiefs is taboo in the future under a ruling by the school faculty.

Miss Lamar Jeter, principal of the school, announced the ruling yesterday, saying that faculty members have been irritated in the past because some students persist in rolling their hair and then spreading a handkerchief over it and going to school.

"The practice is most unattractive," Miss Jeter said. "The girls at our school represent the highest type of girls in the city. They should set a good example for others. We try to teach girls neatness and we want them to be attractive. The practice produced neither."

PACIFIC

106 tons of explosives in their assault on objectives north of Davao and on the west coast of Davao gulf.

Fighters, hitting Cotabato Wednesday, strafed a motor convoy and small shipping.

The Tuesday raid was paralleled by an assault on Zamboanga, second city of Mindanao in the southwestern part of the island. A seaplane was destroyed and two ships hit.

These were part of widespread aerial assaults embracing the entire Southwest Pacific bombing arc, from Bougainville to Borneo. It was one of the most active days in the recent air war.

Escorted heavy units braved adverse weather to strike again at Balikpapan, the blasted oil center of Borneo. By-passed Halmahera also was bomb-combed by fighter-bombers, hitting installations and airdromes.

Oil storage tanks at Boela, Ceram, were destroyed in raids embracing that key island and adjacent Ambon. The raiders ranged as far southwestward as Timor.

Domei made the flat statement that the re-invasion was on, and that "part of the enemy forces seem to have landed on Suluan island" some 400 miles southeast of Manila. It said that American invasion fleets under MacArthur and Adm. Raymond Spruance came in Monday, U. S. time, from the direction of New Guinea and that "our army and navy forces in this sector are confronting the enemy forces with undaunted resolution."

JAPANESE REPORTS

An imperial headquarters communique, monitored by the Federal Communications Commission, said American warships and troop transports reached the waters of Leyte gulf after a two-day blasting of shore installations by naval guns and aerial bombs. It added "our army and navy units in close co-operations are at present intercepting this enemy force."

Domei said the invasion was supported by Yank planes flying from bases in China, the Southwest Pacific and the Palau islands 500 miles east of Leyte.

Meanwhile Japanese-controlled radio Manila said four waves of American carrier planes, totaling 270, hit that district Thursday and also blasted Clark Field, big air base 40 miles northwest of the Philippine metropolis.

The invasion roads to the Philippines have been well paved by all branches of Yank fighting services. The Navy, Marines and Army struck the Marianas and took Guam, Saipan and Tinian. Similar forces invaded the Palau. MacArthur leapfrogged his Army troops along New Guinea to Morotai island, on the Philippines' south flank.

MIGHTY CARRIER FORCE

Then a mighty carrier task force moved in its planes and, with the co-operation of superfortress bombers from China, ruined Japanese aerial centers on Formosa. Carrier planes hammered the Ryukyu islands, part of the Japanese homeland, and the northern Philippines.

An earlier regular communique from Allied Southwest Pacific headquarters made no mention of the Japanese-announced invasion of the central Philippines. General MacArthur reported widespread aerial strikes in the southern Philippines. Fifty heavy bombers dropped 106 tons of explosives in the Davao, Cotabato and Zamboanga sectors of Mindanao. Their targets were oil ships, other vessels and docks.

The Dutch Borneo Balikpapan oil center, the Moluccas, the Solomons, Celebes, New Britain, New Ireland, Bougainville and the Kai islands also were raided.

The bombing and shelling of Car Nicobar island, in the Indian ocean 375 miles west of the Malay peninsula, by an Allied task force was reported by radio Tokyo. The broadcast, monitored by FCC, said the attack started Monday, U. S. time, and continued through Wednesday. The Japanese claimed an Allied carrier and a destroyer were sunk during a Nippon counter-attack on the third day. The report was not confirmed by any Allied source.

The British announced several months ago they had a fleet of warships in the Indian Ocean.

Domei claimed that U. S. Task Force 58, the mighty carrier armada of Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher, that has blasted the Ryukyu islands, Formosa and the northern Philippines since October 9, was not in the Leyte gulf action. The Japanese previously reported, and brought denial from Adm. Nimitz, that Force 58 was badly smashed up east of Formosa. Southwest Pacific bombers co-operated by battering Japanese airfields in the southern and central Philippines as the carrier pilots hit airdromes in the Manila area and to the north.

It was a three-way squeeze play and resulted in MacArthur's return to the rich archipelago, where the American flag was hauled down, except in guerrilla strongholds, in May, 1942.

HOMMA SENDS MESSAGE

Radio Tokyo said that Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma, commander of the Japanese forces that landed in the Philippines almost three years ago, sent a message of "heartfelt sympathy" to the Filipino people because "Americans are again trying to invade your country."

The broadcast, recorded by the Office of War Information, quoted Homma as saying his army invaded the islands because "we were then forced to punish the Americans who poisoned East Asia by establishing headquarters in your land, and now the same Americans are again trying to invade your country; this time not only to fight Japan but also to do harm against you Filipinos."

Homma established headquarters in Manila after the fall of Bataan and Corregidor. He went about the islands with a heavy body-guard and was kept busy in fruitless efforts to pacify the islands and end Filipino guerrilla warfare.

The Philippine underground incorrectly reported Homma killed by guerrillas several times. After about one year the general was relieved of his command and American prisoners in Manila at that time felt he was pulled off the job because of his failure to solve the guerrilla problem.

Georgia 4-H Bread Winner Wants To Be Cadet Nurse

By MARY KEY WYNNE, Constitution Staff Writer.

LYONS, Ga., Oct. 19.—"Keep two boy friends—one in the service and one in civilian life." This is a sound bit of wartime advice Ollie Kate Banks, state 4-H bread winner, gives to girls these days. And, incidentally, she practices what she preaches. Since she has a couple of men herself, that saying must be true. The one that goes like this: "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

"One of my fellers is in the Marines and the other lives here," she said. "I guess I'm partial to the civilian because he's the nearest."

The man who wins Ollie Kate for a wife will have a cook, seamstress, interior decorator, gardener and nurse—all in one. Her home demonstration agent, Miss Marion Price, can vouch for that. "Ollie girl said, "when I began helping our county nurse," Mrs. Alma G. Hinson, with her health clinic work in the schools. It doesn't bother me to be around sick folks, so I think I'll like the profession."

In the course of her four years with the 4-H club, Ollie Kate has prepared 3,550 quick breads, 500 loaves of bread, 3,000 cinnamon rolls, 3,000 plain rolls, 1,200 dishes and 500 meals for the family. Even now the hefty brunette bakes loaf bread and rolls three times weekly. "I do get tired of making bread that often," she admitted.

It's a custom at her home in Johnson Corner for all the neighborhood to call around baking time. "Of course," the girl laughed, "they stay until the cinnamon buns are out of the oven. Presently they leave—and I have no rolls."

Ollie Kate takes an active part in the war effort. Besides raising and canning all the vegetables and fruits possible," she has worked on an ambulance fund drive, the salvage program, sold war bonds, and has done Red Cross sewing. She's just a little more anxious to win the war than some people—her brother, Sgt. Perry Banks, was killed two years ago in the battle of Corregidor.

This hard-working daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Banks Sr. was voted the most popular girl at Toombs Central High school last year. She's a good, all-round girl—the type everybody likes.

Ollie Kate has served as treasurer and vice president of the Toombs Central 4-H Club and has been on several committees of the county council.

Unlike the average girl, Ollie Kate doesn't relish the idea of having her picture made. And as for an interview it's slightly on the boring side for her.

In case the housewives are worrying, the bread-winner never does make a flop in her baking. "That's the least of my worries," she declared.

Ollie Kate has absolute confidence in herself. Before she even entered the contest room in Atlanta she told her agent, "I'm the winner."

HOW TO MAKE EXTRA 'C'

Rewards Offered For 'Bug' Evidence

In an effort to catch and prosecute the big shot bug operators, the solicitor general's office has offered $100 rewards to any persons furnishing enough information about lottery headquarters to insure convictions.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin made the announcement of the rewards to encourage citizens having information of "bug" activities to report such information immediately to his office or to other law enforcement agencies. "We will give the reward for information which can be used to make arrests and to prosecute the big shots in the racket," Assistant Solicitor E. E. Andrews, speaking for Boykin, said.

"The only way to break up the racket is to catch the main operators," Andrews continued. "Therefore, we will make the reward to anyone who can lead us to the operators' headquarters in Fulton or surrounding counties and assist in catching and prosecuting them." It was pointed out that the reward money would come from a contingency fund in the solicitor general's office.

Approximately 30 witnesses, including the professional bondsmen who are reported to have an arrangement with the "bug" men to provide bonds for lottery offenders, appeared before the Fulton county grand jury yesterday.

Although only three indictments were returned by the jury against alleged lottery offenders, the jury spent seven hours hearing the witnesses' testimony and gleaning information about the racket.

Those indicted on a misdemeanor charge for practicing lottery are:

Mattie Dennis, Negro woman arrested Wednesday by County Policemen J. D. Johnson and R. L. Sawyer.

Margaret Harris, of 1097 West Fair street, and Lucile James, of 262 Brown street, who were arrested yesterday by County Policemen A. M. Howie and G. A. Carter.

The two Negro women were arrested at the Brown street address, where lottery tickets were found hidden in a dirty clothes box, the officers reported. Margaret Harris admitted to the officers that she was a lottery "pick-up" worker and had visited five "pick-up" stations before going to the other woman's home.

Lazareth Mapp, Negro, tried for two charges of lottery, before Judge John S. McClelland, of the criminal court of Fulton county, was sentenced to serve ten months.

He made two $1,000 appeal bonds. A nominal fee on a $1,000 appeal bond, made by a professional bondsman, is $55, although it is reported that bondsmen have a special rate of $30 for "bug" operators.

Red Cross headquarters here said Savannah Beach was evacuated yesterday afternoon, and emergency shelters and canteens were set up in the city. Four workers had been sent to the area, the Red Cross added.

Business offices were closed in Savannah during the day and the Savannah Machine & Foundry Company and the Southeastern Shipbuilding Corporation suspended operations at noon.

Winds up to 60 or 80 miles an hour were expected in Savannah, the weather bureau said, and Army installations near the city took precautionary measures.

Hunter Field authorities ordered Army planes moved to northern and western bases for safety.

Many of the planes had been sent to Hunter from Florida yesterday.

NEWS MISSES EDITOR Power failure at Brunswick caused the Brunswick News to miss its first edition in 30 years.

The Atlanta offices of the State Highway Patrol said they had word that the roads in Glynn county, of which Brunswick is the chief city, are impassable.

The weather bureau at Jacksonville said the storm probably would reach a point off Cape Hatteras, N. C., early today and pass out to sea.

Relatively little damage occurred at Jacksonville, which is its worst since 1928, but nearly 50 beach houses were destroyed by wind and tides at Fernandina beach, 25 miles northward.

Between 5,000 and 7,000 people in Florida are being sheltered in temporary establishments, and between twice and three times that many people are being fed, the Red Cross at Washington said.

The most acute situation prevailed at Jacksonville, where all northbound and southbound passenger trains had been held there overnight and many of the passengers were being cared for by the Red Cross.

In the populous Sarasota-Tampa-St. Petersburg area, where the hurricane moved inland at dawn, beach residents were evacuated and no loss of life was reported.

Damage to property in Florida was estimated in the millions of dollars, but no single area seemed severely hit.

24 KILLED IN CUBA Belated reports from Havana said at least 24 were killed, and Surgidoro de Batanbano, a Cuban coastal port built on lowlands and over water, was destroyed by the hurricane Wednesday. It appeared that the Isle of Pines, although badly buffeted, had escaped heavy damage.

At Key West, Fla., six naval vessels were driven aground, but none was seriously damaged and there were no casualties. A Navy tug which removed 21 men from an abandoned lightship, reported radio communication today and reported all aboard were safe.

The tropical hurricane was centered "very close" to Jacksonville at 3 p. m. yesterday afternoon, the Jacksonville weather bureau said.

At the airport weather station gusts of wind of 80 miles an hour were recorded before the lull.

Winds reached 75 miles an hour at Bradenton, knocking down trees and communication lines.

St. Augustine was drenched by rain. Water ran waist-deep in some streets flooding ground floors of many buildings. The St. Augustine Record failed to publish for the first time in 50 years because its ground floor was flooded.

The Florida citrus loss estimate came from Gaynor Wiggins, secretary-treasurer of the Orlando company. He said the grapefruit crop loss might be from 40 to 60 per cent and the orange crop damage 15 to 20 per cent.

Solons Move To Aid Battered Florida

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Florida congressmen moved speedily today to help solve problems created by heavy hurricane damage in their state.

Although hampered by a lack of specific knowledge regarding losses, because they were unable to get telephone calls through to the state, they took a variety of preliminary steps.

Sen. Pepper, Democrat of Florida, wrote letters to heads of three government agencies asking this action to assist citrus growers.

An immediate survey by OPA and War Food Administration of damage suffered; a reconsideration by OPA of citrus price ceilings, in view of heavy crop destruction; a relaxation by the WPA of restrictions on use of tin, so the fruit can be salvaged in juice form.

ICKES TO DEWEY— BUTTERMILK DIET

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(UP)—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, accusing Gov. Dewey of "trying to win the presidency under false pretenses," said he had never seen a man "so reckless with the truth" as the GOP presidential nominee.

The chocolate soldier from Albany must sense what is going to happen to him on November 7," he said. "He has become petulant. He ought to drink buttermilk with his lunches. . . . No one ought to be elected on a sour note."

HURRICANE

Continued From First Page reported at 9:30 p. m. that the Atlantic hurricane is centered off the coast near Savannah, moving northeastward about 25 miles an hour with winds of 60 to 80 miles an hour near its center.

Twelve hundred persons were evacuated from St. Simons island, where heavy water damage was reported.

Red Cross headquarters here said Savannah Beach was evacuated yesterday afternoon, and emergency shelters and canteens were set up in the city. Four workers had been sent to the area, the Red Cross added.

Col. Robert L. Scott, of Macon, author of the best seller, "God Is My Co-Pilot," a story of his experience on the China battlefield, arrived at the Hotel Biltmore last night en route to Orlando, Fla.

Col. Scott came by air directly from the west coast where he has assisted in making the film version of his book.

Col. Scott said that at Orlando he expects to take over a new army plane and will pilot it to a base in the north. He said he didn't know to which base he would be reassigned. He was scheduled to leave by plane for Orlando at 2:05 a. m. today but said that weather conditions due to the hurricane might delay his trip for some hours.

Truman Backs War Plant Use By Industry

Dewey Noncommittal On State Office Blast At New York Talk

By The Associated Press. Sen. Truman pledged President Roosevelt last night to sponsor private industry's use of the government's $20,000,000,000 worth of war plants and to the completion of government power projects to provide "the nucleus for a great prosperity for the entire nation."

The President's fourth-term running mate declared government must make "a well-conceived and well-directed effort to encourage private business to utilize the plants to stimulate postwar production and employment for returning soldiers and war workers."

"I mean," he said, "a government that will place the operation of these plants and the welfare of millions of workers above the selfish interests of those who fear competition."

POLITICAL TRICKSTER Truman opposed abandoning the war plant investment in an address prepared for delivery at a Democratic rally in the civic auditorium here . . . broadcast to the Pacific coast.

In five-minute speech an hour earlier on a nation-wide radio hook-up, he also asked President Roosevelt's re-election and asserted, "We cannot take a chance on either a reactionary or a political trickster."

He said Gov. Dewey, the Republican standard bearer, came west to convince it he and his "reactionary backers" favored the Grand Coulee, Bonneville and other power projects and later, at Charleston, W. Va., "sought the votes of the reactionaries by charging the President with being a fellow traveler with the Communists" for sponsoring government corporation . . . and credit agencies as "un-American."

Truman said that if Dewey is not in favor of destroying these services "he is guilty of a cheap political trick when he tells us as proof the President is a fellow traveler."

DEWEY INDORSEMENT Gov. Dewey, who speaks in Pittsburgh tonight, endorsed a State Department warning to Nazi leaders that they would "pay the penalty for their heinous crimes" if they carried out reported plans to exterminate Poles, Jews and other non-German nationals held in concentration camps.

The Governor, who has maintained a friendly attitude toward Secretary of State Hull throughout the campaign, had no immediate comment on a State Department statement challenging some parts of his foreign policy speech in New York.

The State Department disputed Dewey's assertion that the treaty signed with Romania last month was "no mere military armistice" but an agreement "restoring peaceful relations with Romania."

The department also declared that this department also took

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP) A prediction that President Roosevelt would carry New Jersey by 150,000 votes was made at the White House today by William H. Smathers, former Democratic senator from that state.

Smathers said he, told the President that Charles Edison, former Democratic governor of the state, was "in error" when he informed Mr. Roosevelt earlier this week that New Jersey would go for Gov. Dewey.

part "at all stages" in the negotiations. Dewey said Secretary Hull had declined to comment the day after it was signed "on the ground that the terms had not been received from Moscow in time for study."

James M. Cox, a staunch advocate of the League of Nations which the U. S. senate rejected after the last war, declared "the powers that directed the conspiracy of 1920 control the Republican party still."

The former Ohio governor and Democratic presidential nominee who campaigned in 1920 on a platform calling for participation in the league, urged the re-election of President Roosevelt, saying:

"The Allied nations which are winning the war together must lead in winning the peace together. And that trio, Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, whose united leadership is winning the war, are not they, standing together, the best guarantee of the victory for peace for which our people yearn?"

HILLMAN HITS BRICKER Meanwhile Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, said today that Gov. Bricker, Republican vice presidential nominee, was making "charges of a candidate gone wild with fear at the sight of the grim spectre of defeat constantly stalking him and his running mate."

Replying to Bricker's Bakersfield, Cal., address, Hillman said in a formal statement:

"His latest charge in Bakersfield, Cal., is an excellent example. He charges that he has been informed that agents of the Political Action Committee have launched a campaign of 'threats and intimidation' to line up labor votes for the New Deal. And he goes on to say that this means that 'workers will lose their jobs, fail to get better jobs, or will be let out when war production ends, or will not get peacetime jobs' if they fail to vote for Roosevelt."

"This is all of a piece with Gov. Bricker's other charges, the charges of a candidate gone wild with fear at the sight of the grim spectre of defeat constantly stalking him and his running mate. If he can't win the votes of labor, he's going to scare them into voting for him. He himself explodes his whole ridiculous thesis by assuring labor in the same speech: 'I want to give you this assurance. We still have a secret ballot in this country. When you enter the voting booth, you enter alone.'" of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard said that the Roosevelt administration's "long record of accomplishment in agriculture" assured it the support of farmers.

"The Republican party now asks farmers to believe it thinks the farm program is just wonderful—that it simply wants to make the program better," Wickard said.

"But we must never forget," Wickard said, "that not only did the Republican party do nothing for farmers when it was in power, but that when the Roosevelt administration really tackled the farm program, the Republican party opposed or tried to hamstring nearly every constructive move."

Wickard said that "as a working organization, the Republican party still is dominated by the Old Guard—the same high-tariff, Wall Street, reactionary Old Guard."

Wickard described President Roosevelt as "the best friend agriculture ever has had in the White House."

Old Minstrel Days On Rialto's Screen

The nostalgia of the old vaudeville and minstrel days and the songs of the minstrel shows show business' greatest, provide the color and musical background for the Rialto theater's current attraction, "The Minstrel Man," with Benny Fields in the starring role.

Fields, who gained fame on Broadway and on the stage singing "Swanee River," "The Baby" and "Remember Me to Carolina," repeats these tunes in this delightful little musical. It's strange, too, a minor performer who sees his daughter grow up under the tutelage of other people to be a promising young entertainer. Gladys George and Alan Hale are featured in supporting roles.

New Venereal Hospital In Operation

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Atlanta's new 378-foot long, 150-bed capacity quarantine hospital established to curb the spread and control venereal diseases is in operation this morning. The new facility, working co-operatively with other local health units, will meet the city's needs for years to come, Dr. James F. Hackney, city health director, believes.

The old prison building at the city farm on which the mayor and council expended $40,000 in renovating and equipping, was formally dedicated yesterday when Mayor Hartsfield and members of council were hosts to the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, city, Fulton county, state and federal officials at opening exercises. Visitors were served dinner by H. H. Gibson, superintendent of the city prison farm, and his aides, and then inspected the new facility which will accommodate 150 patients at a time and which rounds out a three-year fight for adequate facilities to aid in stamping out social diseases.

James Thurman, vice president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which spearheaded a drive for better control methods in the city about two years ago, sat at the speakers' table along with newsmen, physicians and others who had assisted in an educational and publicity campaign which resulted in conversion of the old prison building into the new hospital.

Mayor Hartsfield, who presided as toastmaster, thanked the Junior Chamber and individuals for their assistance.

More than 150 persons attended the opening. Dr. William L. Dobes, one of the prime movers in launching the drive was singled out for praise by Hartsfield and also by members of the Junior Chamber.

Two Billion, 345 Million Pounds of Peanuts

There are three great peanut sections in this country. They are grouped as follows: the Virginia-North Carolina region, the Georgia-Florida-Alabama region and Texas.

These three regions will produce this year the staggering total of 2,345,730,000 pounds of peanuts. Georgia is one of the great peanut states. It will produce this year, according to crop estimates, 812,725,000 pounds of peanuts. Peanuts are bringing about $165 a ton. This means that Georgia peanut farmers will receive this year approximately $64,000,000 in cash. One farmer, with 300 acres in peanuts, already has sold his crop for $48,000. It is a typical story. The peanut farmer has done better with his crop than any other farmer.

He also is being smart. He is donating

25 cents per ton to a fund which will advertise peanuts and do research into peanut uses. The value of the crop to Georgia is obvious. How much better Georgia will fare than is revealed by the figures which show that Georgia produced twice as many pounds as Alabama and more than eight times as many as Florida.

Georgia's general peanut business, such as manufacture of peanut butter, candy bars and packaging of peanuts for sale, is another important factor. We do not merely sell the raw material product as we do with so many of our resources. The value is added in Georgia.

The Constitution congratulates the peanut farmers of the state and the Peanut Council which is so intelligently and successfully advancing the interests of the growers.

No Time for Exorbitant Rates

It is gratifying to note that the Office of Price Administration has joined the fight, led by Georgia Public Service Commissioner Walter R. McDonald, for the elimination of a 10 per cent increase in railroad passenger rates, in effect since 1942, and to block proposed hikes, averaging 5 per cent, in rail freight rates.

The OPA has petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission, before whom Commissioner McDonald will appear next week as representative of the southeastern states, to do away with the passenger fare increase and cancel the proposed freight rate hike, terming both moves "wholly unnecessary and highly inflationary."

An Idea for Those Who Like Books

In the column of letters to the editor there appears today a suggestion which we wish to endorse and commend. A young lady suggests that all of us who like to read books and who have enjoyed the facilities of the Carnegie library show our appreciation by each contributing a good book to the library. She recommends a "Library Day" on which each person who can will present to the library a good, current book. For those who desire to contribute but do not wish to select the

"The railroads have far outstripped industry generally in the rate of profit benefits obtained from the war," declared the OPA's petition. "Such increases are not required for the maintenance of adequate, economical and efficient transportation service."

If, as seems generally accepted, such is the case, then certainly railroad rates, especially as regards freight, should be lowered rather than raised. Too much of our future growth and prosperity depend on favorable tariffs for them to be based on anything save the smallest possible margin of profit consistent with efficient operation.

book there would be the proviso of sending a check to pay for a book. Book prices range from $2 to $3.50. The Constitution does not mean to institute a campaign, believing that the job of those friends of the library and of books who may be interested. If they and the library get together the job can be done. Perhaps the mayor might even designate a special day as "Library Day." All of us owe a debt to books and a well-stocked library is one of the institutions which measure the worth of a city. The idea is a good one.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

Library Day

Editor Constitution: It has been my idea for many years to have a day designated "Library Day" in Georgia, and, if possible, throughout the United States.

It is true that each of us some day and in some way has derived benefits from the use of a public library. Quite a few libraries are maintained by public funds, which we contribute to indirectly in a trivial manner.

The purpose for which I have in mind in creating a "Library Day" would be for each individual, without working a hardship, and voluntarily on his or her part, contribute a book or books of his or her choice, in keeping with the proper type of literature, and/or magazine subscriptions to the library of his or her choice. It may be that the individual would like to contribute funds but would not care to select a book or books, then in this event he would either send cash or check to the library mentioning the book to be purchased with the funds, or permit the library to make the purchase for him. Then, too, it may be the individual would like to start the purchase of a particular set of books, adding a book each year. You may say there will be duplications—of course there will be—but that is ok because there are numerous times when several sets could be used to an advantage for greater circulation.

"Library Day" would be a step in the advancement of learning, keeping the general public informed on all issues, and a greater number of citizens would avail themselves of the use of the increased accommodations. Let's not forget—the returning servicemen will be glad to know library facilities are improved.

It may be, too, at a later date we could work out some kind of an exchange agreement with foreign countries—bringing the countries closer together through our knowledge.

It is my earnest desire that we have a day designated "Library Day." JULIET DOWLING.

Atlanta.

Friends in Wales

Editor, Constitution: Ralph Jones' splendid article in Friday's Constitution about Wales was very timely and interesting to my family and I, as we have recently become very much enthused over the treatment of our soldiers by the Welsh people.

Our young son, Charles H. Jr., who was inducted into the army, engineers two years ago, and was sent to England after finishing his basic training in this country, was stationed at Swansea, Wales, until his unit departed for the Normandy beaches. Our son never mentioned his location in England, but a few weeks after his arrival overseas we received an air mail letter (postmarked Swansea). The message was from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones, and contained news relative to our boy.

The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.

The Joneses have no children and they virtually adopted our son, entertaining him on weekends, or any other time that he could be secured by the soldier. The couple told of regularly accompanying our son to church every Sunday.

The Joneses had planned a birthday party for Charles on his 18th birthday (July 31), but as Mrs. Jones recently wrote: "We woke up one morning in Swansea and—no! a single soldier, jeep, truck or any sign of an army remained. It seems they had vanished into thin air."

Then the Welsh folks realized that D-day had arrived and the Joneses wrote that they were very sad and lonely, now that the Yank had departed, but stated that their daily prayers were always for the safety and well-being of the soldiers whom they had met from America.

We are very grateful for what the citizens of Wales have done and are doing for our soldier lads.

How true in most instances.

When many of us hear that a great sorrow has befallen a friend, our hearts are torn with sympathy, and we rush to his aid.

Perhaps he, too, is dazed by grief or too bewildered by shock to realize that we are there.

Then, too soon, we become absorbed in the day-by-day complications of our own lives—half forgetting that our friend is groping a lonely way, over stony paths, toward readjustment.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you, Weep, and you weep alone."

How true in most instances! But never true if one had the rare privilege of claiming Dr. Michael Hoke for a friend.

I think it was when his friends were in deep trouble that he thought of them and loved them most. When others seemed to forget those who were in distress found him near their sides and felt the touch of his consoling hand.

An Atlanta doctor, who had to give up the practice of medicine and Dr. Hoke, for whom he had a warm affection, of the difficulty he was having in adapting himself to the complete change in his life. "I understand," was Dr. Hoke's reply, "I, too, have had the same experience, and I know what it is that you are missing. You are missing the opportunity of being helpful. There isn't a day of my life that I do not long for the joy that a surgeon can find in serving others."

In the passing of this great humanitarian the world has lost a man of rare nobility, and hundreds, like ourselves, have lost a wonderful friend.

Truly it could never be said of Dr. Michael Hoke that his friends wept alone!

Bellyacher

Editor, Constitution: Will you please let me have a little corner, too, in your paper? Just want to say to "Square-Shooter" in Saturday's Constitution, that of all the grippers and bellyachers I have ever read after, Westbrook Pegler tops them all. Why instead of enjoying the greatness and goodness in people it gives him chronic acule indigestion, which keeps him in a constant howl. He seems to have an evil eye.

MRS. J. V. ELEANOR Summerville, Ga.

Why?

Editor Constitution: Pegler says Roosevelt is an enemy of labor. Who was the President who made capital pay labor a living wage?

Who cut the working hours from 12 to 8? Why does Pegler hate unions? Because capital can't keep all the money, and the labor is getting money to live and have clothes that's fit to wear. Roosevelt is the only President that has helped a workingman. Pegler can knock Roosevelt and the unions, but Pegler will find out he is wrong. Labor will put Roosevelt back because they will not bite the hand that fed them.

I Knew There'd Be Lots of B-29 Action

In the summer of 1943 I went on my first trip to an American bomber base to a large headquarters well out of London.

They assigned me a cot in one of the huge rooms of the great old house which our army had taken over. "You're tired," I said, "and when I am very tired, as I will be before we get to bed tonight, I have been told that I snore. If you have any heavy brass around here keep me at a far distance from his cot."

"The colonel sleeps over there," they said, pointing to a corner. "You won't bother him. He never sleeps when anyone else does." The Fortresses were going off the next morning. We sat late talking. About midnight a short, grave-looking man walked in. He had on an old sweater and no rank showed. They introduced me to Col. LeMay. He got a lot of papers and went out. We turned in about 2 o'clock and they called us at 4, a hand shaking our shoulder and a brief flash of light doing the job. We dressed in the dark, as not all in the vast room were getting up. It was raw and cold with a heavy ground fog which was almost mist.

We ate the powdered eggs, mixed and scrambled hurriedly so that now and then a lump of dry powder broke between the teeth as one ate them. We gulped the hot coffee and poured more. Sleep was heavy in our eyes. We were half finished when Col. LeMay came in, his eyes deep and red with fatigue and lack of sleep. He took a cup of coffee and went on out.

Out at the field dawn was just coming. The heavy Fortresses were being given a last-minute check and pilots and crew were coming out of the briefing room. Soon the big Fortresses were waddling up to the head of the runways, taking off with a roar and climbing heavily into the sky, laden with bombs and gasoline. The first red rays of sun caught the wings and dew streamed off, iridescent and shimmering for a moment as if unseen hands were shaking out an exotic scarf.

LeMay saw them and then climbed wearily into a jeep. The driver took him back to headquarters.

"He'll sleep now two or three hours," said the officer with me. See what I meant when I said your snoring wouldn't worry him?"

Technique I nodded, watching the man go. I had heard a lot about him from fliers and ground crews. They gave LeMay credit for the success of our Fortress raids. He had gone on nine of them himself.

He came back with an idea. It was that the Forts could do the job if they were flown compactly so that they presented concentrated fire power at any angle. So, he started the pilots flying in a new formation. He had them fly those big "Fort's" as closely packed as if they were fighters. I flew with them on two practice runs over the North sea, and how those pilots sweated! He was severe about it. He would stand for no loosely-down formations.

The men saw that the formations got them through. More men came back. So, while the discipline of it irked them at times, they knew the value of it. He drilled them over and over, flying them tightly packed so that no fighter could come in at them from any angle without being greeted with massed fire power.

I stayed around days, and nights, watching the meticulous care taken by the men, the long hours over weather reports, the careful planning for each raid.

B-29 A few weeks ago I saw a story and a picture. It said that Gen. Curtis LeMay had been transferred from England to China, where he would take over co-ordination of the B-29 bombing groups.

"Oh, oh, oh," I said to myself. "I know some pilots and crews that are just as good as I myself. I don't know what I don't know, but I can guess."

Anyhow, I just sat back and waited. I knew something would happen. And sure enough, it did. The Superforts began to go more and more frequently. And instead of four or five being lost, one or two or none were lost.

Gen. LeMay went along with them. I'll bet they flew those big ships as closely packed as Thunderbolts. It can be done. It is dangerous if the pilot is good. And it really irks the ships back if there are fighters around. If there was just flak I imagine he had other techniques. I don't know.

Anyhow, he and the B-29's, some of them from the Atlanta plant near Marietta, have been giving the Philippines and Formosa a lot of bombing, flying the more than 2,300 round-trip miles with only a day of rest.

It is pointed out that the quiet, grim-lipped, chunky man sitting there in one of them. He is 36, married, has one daughter. He is from Columbus, Ohio. He it was who got the shuttle service going to Africa in 1941.

You keep your eye on the B-29's.

Airpark and Airport Are Both Essential

The Personal Aircraft Council of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, in conjunction with the National Aeronautic Association and with the advice of government agencies, has published a book designed to offer intelligent suggestions to communities which do not want to be left out of the procession of progress when it becomes commonplace for the ordinary citizen to use a private airplane for personal transportation, just as today he uses his private car.

Private flying, the book asserts, is now at the crossroads where automobiling was in the early stages of the Auto Age. Just as soon as the end of the war permits return by the aviation industry to civilian production, sound and economical personal aircraft will pour off the assembly lines and almost everyone in the country will be flying.

It is pointed out that the automobile only became a universal convenience when public roads making auto travel easy and reasonably safe were built. In the early days of the auto it was the mud and roughness of the then roads which, as much as anything, discouraged early motorists.

The system of highways which now nets the United States has proven the best public investment ever made. It has created a new era of economic prosperity.

The same development is envisaged for personal aircraft as soon as the cities, towns and communities provide the necessary equipment. This equipment is airparks.

The difference between an airport and an airpark is great.

An airport is one of the vast and costly centers of commercial air transport, where fast and speedy commercial air liners come in at all hours of the day or night. Where there is a schedule which must be maintained as rigidly as train schedules, where the average, casual private airplane cannot come in because of the minute-to-minute use of the runways for the fast, scheduled air liners.

The airpark is a convenient, smaller and less regulated landing place, where private planes may drop down and land at any time, and park while their operators attend to their affairs in the neighborhood. Just as, today, we park our automobiles on a parking lot and go about our business.

The landing strips on these airparks, it is recommended, may be in the shape of X's, T's, V's or L's. The surfacing should be turf and they may cost, according to type, anywhere from $6,000 to $250,000.

The most costly are the larger ones, rectangular, with an X landing strip, which should be located in the downtown city area, within a block or two of the main business section. These can be constructed on land cleared of sub-standard buildings and should be so planned as to combine the advantages of the airpark with a park where pedestrians may stroll or rest.

Suburban Airpark Then there should be airparks conveniently located in the suburban or residential areas. These need not be so expensive nor so large as the downtown airparks. Cost is estimated at from $25,000 to $100,000. It is suggested they be in the shape of an L or a V.

Another type is for creeks which have quiet bodies of water, such as smooth rivers or lakes, where aircraft equipped with water landing pontoons may land. These are air harbors, equipped with hangars and ramps for the storage of the aerial watercraft.

Then, last of all, are small landing strips, placed adjacent to cross-country highways, away from the cities, where aircraft may land if their operators do not desire to enter the city area. These, too, are emergency landing parks, to be dotted all over the country. Called flightstops, these need not cost more than $10,000, maybe less. They will be in the shape of T's or L's and will not cost much to maintain.

And there should be an airpark at every holiday resort, where personal aircraft owners may easily land when on holiday.

All these of course, should be constructed and maintained by the community, through tax money. Just as highways are constructed and maintained from tax money.

Whether a community sees the light or not, such airparks will be commonplace essentials in a few years' time and the city or town which fails to provide them will find itself gradually slipping out of the limelight and deteriorating into one of those forgotten towns. It will be as serious as though the town were, today, on neither paved highway nor railroad.

You do want to plan now for your community? Write to Personal Aircraft Council, Shoreham building, 15th and 8th streets, Washington 5, D. C.

They will tell you how to create a local committee to push such a program and, in full detail, how to go about it.

Ingredient For Peace

Whether your son or grandson will die of a bullet or a piece of shrapnel in some foreign land depends in large measure on your state of mind and the state of mind of other people like you. Do you really desire everlasting peace?

Most people seem to think peace can be preserved only so long as Japan and Germany are kept disarmed and helpless, but these two are not the only nations that make war. Check the history of the last century and you will find few years when there was no warfare anywhere on earth.

Peace between nations, like that between our own states must be based upon the common belief that war is unthinkable.

When statesmen discuss lasting peace, they seem to lack both enthusiasm and deep conviction. They seem to regard it as an impractical ideal that might be attained if we were willing to pay the price; but they frankly doubt the willingness of other nations to co-operate in such idealism, and their pessimistic words boil down to this: "If peace is too much bother or costs too much or interferes too much with our freedom of action, we don't want it."

So long as people feel that way, we'll have no peace. So long as the idea of world peace is debatable, there is little hope of attaining it. We couldn't end slavery and human sacrifice if they were still debatable. An evil thing is doomed only when the common conscience of mankind condemns it—when all rational people hate it and look upon it with horror and loathing, as they look upon sex perversion.

As a man thinketh in his heart, so he is. That rule never fails. If all men in their hearts hate war and desire peace, we shall have peace. But while we regard war as a terrible but unavoidable evil, which may be justified under other means of persuasion fail, we shall have war.

Everlasting peace between nations is as "practical" as certainly attainable as honest money, or incorruptible courts, or freedom from tyranny, or the abolition of dueling, peonage and child labor. Mankind can do what it determines to do.

We can have peace if we are fully determined to end war—if we are determined to end it, we are determined to end it, regardless of cost, not for 20 or 30 years, but forever and ever, so that future generations will look upon war as we look upon the Aztec practice of sacrificing human beings to placate a savage god.

There's No End To Japanese Cruelty

Any doubt which may have lingered as to the true nature of our enemy in the Pacific conflict was wiped out this week.

Any suspicion that accounts of their heartless cruelty were exaggerated, that reports of their barbaric nature were strictly for propaganda purposes, went out the window with an authenticated story from the China-Burma-India theater of unprecedented inhumanity which violates every accepted tenet of civilized warfare.

Those fiendish, little yellow devils, declares a veteran just returned from long service in the Pacific, have devised a torture which every baseball fan will recognize as the ultimate in savagery.

Fighting, as they were, against an American unit made up largely of natives of Brooklyn, the merciless Japs, to whom nothing is sacred, would daily broadcast major league baseball scores, invariably judging the National League results so that the Dodgers lost—often by astronomical amounts—to their arch enemies, the Giants.

This, for my money, is the most vicious torture devised since a St. Louis citizen moved his 18-day dieting wife to an apartment over a bakery.

Tales of San Francisco being occupied, of Detroit being bombed, and of their wives running around with draft dodgers, our warriors can take with a grain of salt. But to go too far when he starts taking Dem Bums' name in vain.

Has Governor Dewey Abandoned All Hope

WASHINGTON.—Some of the newspapermen who have accompanied Gov. Dewey in many of his campaign trips over the country report that he has abandoned all hope of winning the election, but is determined to wage as vigorous a fight as possible with a view to holding himself available as a Republican presidential contender again in 1948.

The reports have a plausible ring and would tend to explain the type of campaign Dewey is conducting. After starting out in a mild sort of way, the New York Governor has reduced the plane of his campaign to about the lowest level the country has seen since the Hoover-Smith contest of 1928. Exposed by the administration for repeating one falsehood, Dewey consistently has trotted out another of even greater proportions to support his first misrepresentation. The tactics he is pursuing are those of a desperate man. Under no conceivable circumstances are they counted to gain support for him from the great mass of independent voters of the country.

A typical example of Dewey's tactics is found in the manner he replied to the White House statement over the weekend, showing how he had deliberately lifted single sentences from various statements of government officials and used them in a way to indicate the very opposite from what the officials had intended to say. The Republican candidate's reply was that the White House statement confirmed everything he had said. No intelligent person could read the two statements without being amazed at Dewey's distortions.

They are not what is to be expected of a candidate for the high office of President.

Dewey stuck his neck out earlier in the campaign by attributing to the administration a policy informally suggested by Selective Service Director Hershey about it being cheaper to keep men in the armed services than it would be to set up agencies to provide them with jobs after the war.

He continues to repeat the charge that this is the administration program, despite the fact that on the very day he made his original charge demobilization plans were announced by the War Department which refuted what he said.

And apparently he has not been impressed at all by the President's reminder that a provision has been incorporated in a bill already passed by congress prohibiting the very thing he says the administration is planning.

Dewey must realize he is defeated, or he would not be guilty of these rank deceptions. Ordinarily the thing for him to have done after sticking his neck out as he did would be to forget the incident, hoping the people would also.

But, no; he comes back again and again with the same nonsense, each time resorting to a bigger falsehood to prove the first.

Now among the Roosevelt haters, of course, it doesn't matter how extravagant a misrepresentation the Republican candidate makes. The bigger it is the more they applaud, willing, as they are, to believe anything against the President.

And so, even though he loses the election, Dewey, through his tactics, will leave the vast majority of his supporters happy over the type of vituperation he dispensed in the campaign.

One of the chief complaints made against Wendell Willkie by the Old Guard in the 1940 campaign was that he did not go after Roosevelt strong enough to suit them. They wanted Willkie to do pretty much as Dewey is now doing. Disappointment over his failure to do so is one of the main reasons why they rejected him this year.

All of this may or may not help Dewey with respect to the 1948 nomination. He evidently believes it will, though causing him to carry a few less states than he might otherwise in the present contest.

Concerning Revolutionary Justice

Two cases in Italy of punishment of Fascist criminals have obviously disturbed the American correspondent who reported them. The first was the killing by mass violence of the Roman prison director, Donato Carretta, and the second the condemnation to 30 years imprisonment of the director of the Bank of Italy, Vincenzo Azzioli.

In the first case, the man who had been the jailer of the Roman anti-Fascists, and who was mistaken by some for his superior, Pietro Caruso, was lynched and drowned by the mob. Herbert L. Matthews, of the New York Times, who was present, was understandably horrified. For there is, in truth, nothing more terrible and insulting to human dignity than the spectacle of a blood-thirsty mob. Mr. Matthews' spontaneous reaction was: "This is worse than Fascism!" Here he was wrong. Among the atrocities committed by Fascists was the drowning in the Arno river of five liberal lawyers, in the fall of 1925, under circumstances almost exactly parallel—and with the difference that the Florence lynching was organized by the state. And what has been done surreptitiously in the torture chambers of Fascist and Nazi secret police, and in the so-called camps of annihilation, being coldly planned, has a wickedness not to be compared with an outbreak of spontaneous fury and violence in which the tortured hunk back at the torturer.

But Mr. Matthews was also disturbed by the trial of Azzioli. Azzioli was accused of sending the entire gold reserve of Italy to the Germans and of making available other funds to Fascist chiefs. Azzioli's defense was that he had acted under orders and that it was not his business to defy the state. Mr. Matthews observed that the court had the nature of a political tribunal rather than a court of law and was disturbed as to the legality of its acts.

Again, in interviewing German prisoners and civilians in German territories occupied by our troops, correspondents have repeatedly asked the same question and received the same reply. To the question: "How could you commit such atrocities or stand by while they were being committed?" the answer was: "We did not approve, but we acted under government orders and had we refused would have been shot."

Not one of our correspondents is satisfied with that answer. But the situation presents a very difficult problem, which will become increasingly difficult, in trying war criminals: What is legal? What is law? Can a man be held responsible for laws which were made without his consent and by decree, but which nevertheless had all the appearances and paraphernalia of legality?

One man, and oddly enough an artist and not a lawyer, saw through the crux of this question. That was Toscanini. Living in Italy, under a heavy shadow, he wished to leave, and to do so had to apply to the state for a passport. He refused to do this on the ground that the Fascist government was not a legitimate or legal government but a usurper, and that he would not recognize it.

Similarly, when Karl Goerdeler, the German recently hanged by the Nazis, severed his relations with the state as a civil servant, he did it on the grounds that the Nazi government was not the state, but was the anti-state, a party seizure of illegal power.

Now, if apparent legality is, in essence, illegality, then the supporters of legality are driven into formally illegal actions. The problem of law becomes completely confused. The lawbreaker becomes the supporter of law and the law-abiding its destroyer.

I am, for instance, put to it to imagine under what strictly legal authority Hitler can be tried for anything.

In the conscience of mankind it has become a crime to wage an aggressive war, but it is no crime in law. Possibly he could be tried for crimes against the state under the Weimar constitution, still theoretically in existence. But a smart lawyer could make a persuasive case that everything he had done had been formally legal.

Yet this state of affairs is in sharp contradiction to the feeling for justice all over the world. In such a situation, there is no justice except revolutionary justice. All law rests, in its analysis on the state of public consciousness and conscience. The ancient Greeks believed that to kill a tyrant was justice, since tyranny was the negation to justice. The basis of the Swiss law was an illegal act—the killing by Wilhelm Tell of the "Protector" imposed upon the Swiss cantons, whose authority the Swiss would not accept.

It has always been futile to believe that Fascism could be liquidated by the forms of law by which we try ordinary criminals in constitutional states. A new justice has to be born, and a new law created, and it will be born in revolutionary tribunals because there are no other tribunals.

The test of revolutionary justice is always historical, not "legal."

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Michener And the UAW

NEW YORK—The recent national convention of the United Auto Workers of the CIO, voted to remove from office Lew Michener, its regional director on the west coast, who has long been identified with the Harry Bridges, or Communist, faction.

This development in Michener's case, sets in motion, a train of thought. Michener was one of the most violent leaders of the Communist insurrection, so described by President Roosevelt, himself, at the plant of North American Aviation in Inglewood, Cal., in 1940, when the United States was beginning its armament program, an effort based on all sides by sabotage under Communist union auspices, mainly those of the CIO.

Mr. Roosevelt finally sent the Army to drive off the rioters so that American workers, men and women, could build and learn to build fighting planes. This blockade was not a labor dispute between the company and the employees but, as the President said, an obstruction of the American program of preparedness, directed from a foreign source, Russia being at that time in a state of collaboration with Nazi Germany. The American Communists who now are found in Mr. Roosevelt's camp, violently co-operating with Sidney Hillman, held the war to be an imperialist campaign and, in the United States, their plan was to hamper conversion from the industries of peace to those of war, so that Hitler could beat Britain and then turn in full strength and, possibly, with Russia's help, against this nation.

After the insurrection was broken, the United Auto Workers took the political necessity of mild rebuke to Michener. He was removed from his position and made ineligible for "elective" office in the union for one year. Then, to circumvent its own order, the union gave him an "appointive" position as assistant to his own successor. In this combination the successor was a stooge, and Michener resumed his old powers after a brief interval. Within a year he was restored to full standing on the national executive body of the U. A. W. and to his old job as west coast director.

Since then, although physically fit, childless, though married, and only 35 years old at present, Michener has received draft deferments on the ground of essentiality in the war industrial effort. Last year he was called for induction but his case was appealed to Washington and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the director of the draft, gave him a deferment in the national interest. Michener, by then, had become a member of the regional War Labor Board.

His essentiality might seem to have ended now with his removal from his latest union job, not at all in rebuke for the North American sabotage or for Communist association, but for internal political reasons arising from factional rivalry within the union. This his deferment will end does not follow, however, and seems unlikely, although millions of other men no more favorably situated financially have been drafted during the long term of his comfortable immunity.

Another UAW celebrity of the same exciting period, Wyndham Mortimer, also was "disciplined" in an outward display of patriotic righteousness and, likewise, was taken care of after a short term in the shadows. Mortimer, as "organizer" for the UAW, helped Michener in the North American job and was formally "dismissed." On Nov. 3, 1941, however, after Hitler had attacked Stalin, he was re-employed by the UAW in Cleveland as an "organizer" at the plant of Thompson Products, manufacturers of equipment for planes and automobiles for the government.

Explaining this action, the president of the Cleveland CIO District Auto Council, said "the boys felt Mortimer should get a break."

Mortimer later bobbed up in Los Angeles as director of the State, County and Municipal Workers and Organizer for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, both of the CIO and both known for their tolerance of Communist activities. And less than a month ago, the Los Angeles county branch of the Communist Political Educational Society, elected him a vice president. This society is one of several disguised assumed by the Communist party for the purposes and duration of the New Deal-Political Action campaign, since the party "dissolved" itself and went underground.

A third diligent UAW dignitary who tied up conversion in that critical period is Harold Christoffel, president of the Allis-Chalmers Union, which strangled production of vital equipment, mostly for the Navy, and specifically for the defense of Pearl Harbor, for 76 days in 1941, prior to the German blow at Russia. It was shown that thousands of fraudulent votes were cast in the belated election, but the Department of Justice did nothing to the union or any of its officials.

Christoffel, now 31 years old, is married and has one child but, at last reports, his wife was employed, and he was enjoying an occupational deferment as an "essential" man in war industry, although he was otherwise fit and eligible for war.

R. J. Thomas, the national president of the UAW, was one of the boss unionists who went to France on a political mission in August to assure the Army men that all talk of strikes and Communist traitorism in the union movement at home was a pack of lies designed to create disunity and weaken their faith in their commander in chief.

ERIC JOHNSTON

Individuals Versus the State Is Today's Issue

A great duel is under way in the world today. Its issue will determine the basic character and quality of human civilization on this planet perhaps for centuries to come. Though it is part and parcel of the present war, that duel transcends the war in ultimate importance. It is manifest on the surface of affairs in some places, implicit in all places. In our own country it has been at the core of the political and economic turmoil of the two decades between the two world wars, and it may become intensified to the point of a showdown in the years ahead, under the terrific pressures of postwar problems.

I refer to the fateful duel between two conceptions of human existence, two ways of life, that may be summed up in the oversimplified formula: Individualism versus statism.

The contest cannot be identified in terms of party labels or regions, because it cuts across political and geographical lines.

The United States is without doubt the outstanding example of individualism in practice, as well as the greatest champion of the principle, yet there are millions in our midst who yearn for the "planned society" under an omniscient and omnipotent state. Russia and Germany are the foremost examples of statism in action, yet there are millions in those countries who yearn for release from the yoke of an enthroned state.

The history of our epoch makes no sense without this key to its mystery. The age-old struggle between authority and liberty seems to have come to a head. In country after country the principle of authority has triumphed; in others, particularly in America, liberty is still in the ascendant, though harassed and on the defensive as never before in our national career.

Everywhere, it would seem, an answer is being sought to the riddle whether the people own the state or the state owns the people; whether the individual human being is still in the ascendancy, or whether the fullest unfoldment of man or the glory and power of his state is the paramount purpose of existence.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, when he was Governor of New York, showed a keen awareness of the safeguards offered by local as against centralized government. He warned against the "present dangerous tendency to forget a fundamental principle of American government, rests on the right of a locality to manage its own local affairs, the tendency to encourage concentration of power at the top of a governmental structure, alien to our system and more closely akin to a dictatorship or the central committee of a Communist regime." He topped the warning with a caution that deserves to be inscribed over every American hearth, as a supplement to all fireside chats from high places:

"We have met difficulties before this, and have solved them in accordance with the basic theories of a representative democracy. Let us not at this time pursue the easy road of centralization of authority, lest some day we discover too late that our liberties have disappeared."

Distrust of excessive government power has been so widespread in America, so much a part of the fabric of our everyday beliefs, that until recently it was taken for granted. All parties and groups agreed on keeping the state within bounds, no matter how they might have disagreed on other things. The circumstance that one needs to recall this and to fight down the rising doubts and questions is in itself a symptom of the totalitarian disease which threatens to infect our body politic.

"The history of liberty," said Woodrow Wilson, "is a history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it. When we resist, therefore, the concentration of power, we are resisting the processes of death, because concentration of power is what always precedes the destruction of human liberties."

History is replete with proofs that concentrated power is not only a corrupting but a self-perpetuating force. Those who acquire it tend to hoard it and to expand it and every opportunity, just as other people hoard and in-crease their physical possessions.

Superstates, alas, are not administered by supermen. They are obliged to operate through the same kind of human, fallible, self-interested persons as run business and labor unions and other private undertakings. They quickly develop a vested right in their offices, and use their power first of all to protect that right. Invariably they snowball into unwieldy bureaucracies that become a class apart, with interests of their own—not of the people but over the people.

It is surely no accident that free political institutions have always coincided with free economy, with private enterprise. It happens that capitalism requires freedom to live and survive—the freedom represented by an infinite number of separate business decisions, some right, some wrong, some profitable, some failures.

State enterprise must restrict freedom, no matter how idealistic and freedom-loving its administrators. Many of those who started the Communist experiment in Russia honestly believed that "the state will wither away" after a time, once capitalism had been abolished. It did nothing of the sort. Far from "withering away," the Soviet state became ever more centralized and the margins of personal freedom ever more restricted.

We may take it, therefore, that political oppression is not an accidental by-product of state monopoly of economic life but a necessary and inevitable condition. The planners, especially if they are public-spirited, cannot risk the bankruptcy of their plans through interference by popular preferences and prejudices. In the nature of the case, the more total the planning, the more total the power needed to implement it.

Those who wish to substitute over-all government planning and operation for the private-enterprise system are fond of ridiculing the "chaos" of our present economic setup. They point to fluctuations in prices and employment, periods of over-production and under-production, statistics on business bankruptcy, a kind of hit-and-miss process in starting new business, manufacturing new products on an experimental basis, and so on. By way of contrast they refer to the neat statistics, standardization, "controlled" production, and "controlled" consumption with an all-powerful government backed by armies of police and armies of officials to supervise the process.

Yet would any of us exchange our slow, unwieldy democracy for a streamlined police state? Quite aside from an unreasonable distaste for regimentation and concentration camps, we know that democracy works.

Out of its seeming chaos a pattern emerges. True, a pattern that arises from below is not so evident to the naked eye as one that is imposed by force from above. But it is there all the same. Out of the clash of many wills, many opinions, many self-interests there comes action that is roughly representative of the general will. The price in inefficiency and delay is minor compared to the price in oppression of body, mind and spirit that must be paid for the streamlined surface unity of the super-state.

Besides, that unity is more seeming than real. Teeming discontents engendered by state tyranny seethe and boil under the surface, threatening to break through. That is why collectivized states must always build up such vast machinery of secret police and other repressive institutions.

That efficiency, too, is more seeming than real. Economic blunders which in a capitalist society show up for all to see are concealed; they can be covered up with lying statistics or political oratory in the totalitarian society. But even granting the most optimistic claims of the super-planners, we prefer our "chaotic" democracy.

OLLIE REEVES

"New Jersey Experiment Station develops 'streamlined turkey'."—News item.

Like a fire atop the mountain or a far-off beacon light

Science brings the torch of wisdom in the watches

of the night

To show up our superstitions and to help us understand

Men and Nature, as companions, should go walking, hand in hand.

Once they scoffed at men who tampered with the mighty universe

And predicted they would suffer some inevitable curse.

That the skies would crash upon them, that the lightning would descend.

Bringing them a swift destruction; to a charred and smoking end.

But the cold and curious men insert the scientific probe

In the brain-pan of the heavens, in the innards of the globe.

And the things they have discovered altered nearly every plan

That was made in the beginning for the benefit of man.

We can sail beneath the waters, we can take the morning's wings

And cavort across the heavens where the lonely planet sings—

We have snatched the torched lightning from the caverns of the sky

And our ghostly doors fly open with the new electric eye.

High above the tallest buildings, etched against the nightly blue,

Magic signs are advertising products old and products new.

Like the fiery words of doom the prophet read upon the wall

To the ancient king who shuddered at the prospect of his fall.

Now they've tangled with the turkey and we wait in much suspense

For the future seems to promise gastronomical events

And we're hoping for a turkey with a meaty upper deck—

One that's somewhat double-breasted, with abbreviated neck.

GALLUP POLL

45,000,000 Expected To Vote

On the basis of latest figures from areas where registration has been completed, including New York City, it now appears that an estimated 45,000,000 civilian voters will turn out to vote on election day.

The armed services vote has been estimated at somewhere between 2,500,000 to 3,000,000. The indications thus are that the total vote to be cast in 1944 will be slightly under the nearly 50,000,000 total of 1940.

A large turnout can normally be expected to help the Democrats but despite this fact, the election on the basis of Institute public opinion sampling surveys look to be almost a toss-up.

While Institute surveys show President Roosevelt having a 51% 40% advantage in the division of popular votes, poll returns now show sentiment so evenly divided in five large industrial states on the eastern seaboard—Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut—that a shift of but one or two per cent could throw all of them to Dewey. Should the Republican candidate take all of these five states which are now at or around the 50-50 line and retain those states where he is indicated to be leading, he would win the election with 287 electoral votes.

On the other hand, if F. D. R. should win these states he could win handsomely in electoral votes even though the division of the popular vote is extremely close percentage-wise. His total would be 341 electoral votes to Dewey's 180.

Because the election is likely to be won or lost in these five states, the chief efforts of both parties will be concentrated there between now and election day.

Another Meeting Slated On Merger of Police Units

By CHRISTINE JONES.

Failing to reach any definite conclusions as to a proposed merger of city and county police departments, the Fulton county board of commissioners agreed to another meeting at 10 a. m. today "to do something about the county police."

Commissioner Clarence Duncan, who insisted upon a meeting today, said he would recommend the adoption of Commissioner Charlie Brown's plan for re-organization and would nominate a member of the county department as chief. City council's police committee meeting with the commission, attempted to keep out of the county's muddled problem by agreeing to a proposed merger of the two police departments, if details can be worked out.

The county commissioners—who appeared reluctant to express opinions as to the advantages or disadvantages of the merger, voted to take up the problem again at 10 a. m. today, following an accusation by Commissioner Clarence Duncan that "we ought to reorganize our department now, and then think of a possible merger."

Duncan's outburst came after Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, of the city police committee, asked what stand the commissioners took on the merger.

"I think the time is here when there must take place a consolidation of overlapping functions of the city and county," Chairman I. Glover Hailey replied to Gilliam's question. "It may take some time to work out the legal end, but a department of public safety or a police board would possibly save money for the community and operate more efficiently. In general terms I am for consolidation." Mayor Hartfield, who attended the meeting, pointed out that a number of problems would have to be solved before a consolidation could be perfected.

"This whole merger business seems to me that members of this board are delaying action on police reorganization, which the public is demanding," Duncan charged. "The county is asking the city to pull its chestnuts out of the fire. Let's organize our own department first, then talk about a merger. I make a motion that we meet at 10 a. m. today, elect a county police chief and settle this thing."

"NO DELAYING" "We haven't been delaying anything," Commissioner Ed L. Almand retorted. "We met with the city officials to discuss this resolution of the League of Women Voters. I don't want to be stampeded into reorganizing our department."

"The implication has been made by my colleague that dilatory action has been taken on the part of this board," Hailey accused. "I am anxious for reorganizing our department and I think we're making progress."

Duncan charged as the meeting broke up that the minutes of the board's last meeting—which concern the qualifications of chief of the police—have been changed. The minutes state that the qualifications should include five years' experience as an officer with the rank above patrolman. The commissioner said the one year's experience was in relation to an officer holding the rank of lieutenant or above.

Although the matter was not publicly introduced, a petition—signed by a large majority of the county police—asking that Chief George Matheson, who has tendered his resignation effective March 1, be retained as chief during the department's reorganization, was presented to Frank R. Fling, clerk of the commission.

It was rumored yesterday that an effort would be made today to name Acting Lt. C. E. Mitchell without any examination held.

BARRIETT RESOLUTION The commission unanimously accepted a resolution introduced by Commissioner Ellis Barriett, chairman of public works, to remodel the River convict camp on the south side, and to establish there a segregation camp for deserving prisoners. It also was agreed that the Sandy Springs convict camp, located on the north side, be abolished.

The resolution was adopted, following a special presentation by the Fulton county grand jury, favoring segregation and the abolishment of the Sandy Springs camp. The jury's presentation also recommended that a vocational trade school should be set up in the segregation program, to rehabilitate deserving prisoners.

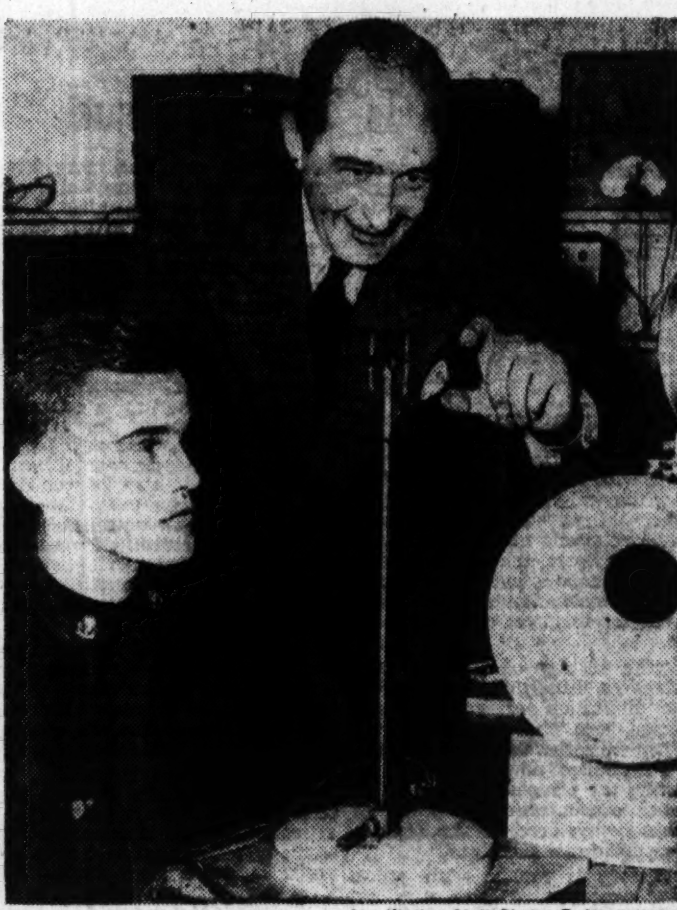

Goldner Discusses Servicemen's Aid

Selective service boards through a reverse of draft procedure should be able to channel discharged servicemen into jobs for which they are fitted, Maj. B. M. Goldner, of Washington, national selective service personnel director, said here.

Speaking before a meeting at the Ansley hotel of personnel managers of Georgia cotton mills, Maj. Goldner expressed belief that the relocation of veterans could be done by selective service boards with a minimum of confusion and error if business and industry co-operates.

He stated that approximately 75,000 volunteer workers are serving on draft boards over the nation and added that each one of these boards is charged with the responsibility of seeing that every veteran gets the kind of job he ought to have.

IT MAY BE SMALL, BUT IT'S POWERFUL—Dean Morrough P. O'Brien, of the University of California, explains to Naval Trainee Frank H. Gurry that this small radio antenna serves the same purpose as the familiar radio tower. O'Brien, who will deliver the commencement address at Georgia Tech today, was discussing the tiny radio set with Gurry in the electrical engineering laboratory during a tour of the Tech campus.

ONE WAY TO SAY 'GOOD MORNING'

GROTON, Conn., Oct. 19.—(P)—A Navy fighter plane glanced off a house rooftop early today in a crash landing, tearing the blanket from the bed of a sleeping two-year-old child who escaped with only minor scratches.

The Navy public relations office announced the crash at Boston, and reported that Connecticut state police found the missing blanket in the wreckage of the plane in a nearby school yard where the craft came to rest after colliding with the side of the school.

The child, Margaret Morton, was buried in plaster and debris until her father, Thomas, dug her out, frightened but unharmed.

The pilot, sole occupant of the single-seater plane, was slightly injured and was taken to the hospital at the New London submarine station. His name was not revealed.

Educator Sees Continuing Need For Engineers

Partially trained engineering workers, pushed too rapidly into responsible positions because of wartime demands, will have a tough time competing for engineering jobs after the war, believes Murrough P. O'Brien, dean of engineering at the University of California.

O'Brien, who will discuss "Post-war Opportunities in Engineering" at Georgia Tech commencement exercises at 5:30 p. m. today, foresees no overabundance of competent engineers. He believes, however, that many men with only partial training, who consider themselves engineers, will be unable to meet postwar competition for jobs.

O'Brien has served on the faculties of Purdue and the Royal College of Engineering at Stockholm, as well as on the staff of the University of California, where he succeeded Col. Blake R. Van Leer, president of Tech, as professor of engineering 15 years ago. He has received the Freeman Traveling Scholarship for study abroad.

Pole Parley Ends Without Accord

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(P)—The conferences in the Soviet capital between the rival Polish factions from Lublin and London have been suspended without final decision, the Moscow radio said tonight. The Lublin group is standing firm on its demand that acceptance by the London delegation of the 1921 Polish constitution be made the basis for any negotiations.

The radio said both groups achieved "clarification of their respective points of view" and that the conferences will be renewed "in the nearest future" after Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk confers with his exile cabinet in London.

MILADY'S CHOICE IS NYLON HOSE

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—(P)—Nylon hosiery was the winner in a "What I Want Most" poll conducted by the Chicago Herald-American over a period of six weeks.

Of more than 300,000 ballots cast for favorite items which are hard to get in wartime, nylons were first choice of 24,200 voters. Showing strength in the last stretch of balloting, girdles snapped into second place, the choice of 21,800. Shoes were third selection in the list of more than 50 items.

'Rose Battle' Top Hereford In Show Here

"Rose Battle 47th" planted her not-so-dainty hooves into the prize ring at the National Polled Hereford Show and rolled her brown eyes as E. A. Darlow named her grand champion female.

Owned by John M. Lewis and Sons, of Larned, Kan., the senior yearling heifer earlier had been judged first in her class in yesterday's contest. Today, she and the reserve female champ, "Autumn A.VIII," owned by the Welch Brothers, of Garfield, Kan., will be sold at auction beginning at noon, along with many others of the prize Herefords. The sale will continue through Saturday.

The grand champion sale bull, owned by Jim Gill, of Whon, Texas, will lead off the sale today, with the two prize heifers following. This will be the first time in the history of the breed that both the champion and reserve champion have been sold at a show.

As 64 of the Herefords paraded in the get of sire class, B. O. Gammon, secretary of national association, said to the grandstand crowds, "This is the greatest exhibition of top Polled Hereford cattle ever assembled."

Class winners, second, and third place, were:

ALL IN THE GAME JACK TROY

Alex, Hagberg Agree I asked Coach Bill Alexander what he thought about Cmdr. Oscar Hagberg picking his Navy team to beat Georgia Tech by a touchdown.

"I agree with him. I think Hagberg has the right dope," Alex declared. "The Navy guys are loaded."

Something new has been added to the Navy team for the game Saturday. No longer will the best back Dana Bible ever coached sit on the bench. No longer will the understudy to Creighton Miller, Notre Dame's outstanding left halfback last year, look on from the sidelines.

Fleeters who can carry the football have replaced upperclassmen.

Ralph Ellsworth, the hottest thing in a football suit in the southwest last year, has taken over at wingback. Chunky Fred Earley, from Notre Dame, has gone to fullback. Jolting Joe Sullivan will pave the way at blocking back.

Even Bob Jenkins, vaunted running back from Alabama, is being replaced. But it's small wonder that this is happening, for the replacement is to be Hal Hamberg, 150-pound star from Lenoke, Ark. Hamberg was responsible for four touchdowns against Georgia Tech last year at Baltimore. Hamberg ran for one and three touchdowns passes.

Another fine back is Clyde Scott, from Smackover, Ark. In making wholesale backfield changes, Cmdr. Hagberg discarded a system that didn't work. Navy had been using two backfields which were considered interchangeable as units. But it came about that blocking precision, coordination and clean ball handling was lacking.

Even such a back as Bruce Smith, who starred at Miami High several years ago, has been sent to the sidelines to make way for Earley, Ellsworth, Sullivan and Hamberg. Cmdr. Hagberg is entirely satisfied with the Navy line.

Fullback in Motion Navy will have a man in motion at fullback who will be a constant threat to whip out into the great open spaces to take long passes from Hamberg. Earley was a man-in-motion at Notre Dame. He was good enough last year to divide time with Creighton Miller, probably the best halfback in the country.

The backfield changes very likely will make the Middles an entirely different team. However, Cmdr. Hagberg, who served for almost two years in a submarine unit in the South Pacific, has an explanation for the narrow win over Duke last week.

"Duke played the game of its life against us. . . And the movies confirmed that we got every bad break in the book—fumbles, penalties, false starts and slips on the wet turf. We have plenty to do on offense. We figure to be stronger for Georgia Tech."

Georgia Tech figures Navy will be greatly improved, too. It is very obvious that the Navy material is as good as possessed by any outfit in the country. There is little excuse for Navy having lost to North Carolina Preflight.

I had been thinking all along that Georgia Tech might sink the Navy, but the week's developments leave room for question and wonder.

There is, for instance, the physical condition of several of the Tech players. And there is, too, the fact that exams are on at the Flats and the boys are devoting a lot more time to lessons than to football. They're Navy V-12 boys and there's a war, as someone suggested, going on.

Jackets Bruised Boys like Roland Phillips, Luke Bowen and Capt. Phil Tinsley have injuries, and they haven't been able to devote much time to training room treatment or training because of examinations.

None of this is to be construed as groundwork for an excuse or alibi. Tech may yet win this game. Many competent observers feel Tech will win. Football's a funny game. The ball bounces oddly. Around and around it goes and where it stops nobody knows.

Tech could win. But Navy should. Navy has the better material. Navy is in better physical condition. Tech doesn't have many able blocking backs left.

It just happens that Auburn, gunning for an upset, gave the Jackets a rugged afternoon. The game left a lot of the Tech boys bruised.

Could be that Duke bruised Navy somewhat, but there's enough spare material so that it really doesn't matter. Some of the more able football observers of this nation have a feeling that Tech's deception will balance any advantage the Navy might have in material.

But that's something that only a couple of hours of activity Saturday afternoon at Grant Field will decide. Tech has a most deceptive attack. And I am sure, too, that the defense against passes is much better than it was a season ago.

Whatever happens Saturday it should be a great football game to watch. And there will be a full house to see it. Rain would affect only the crowd.

"We wouldn't mind rain, just so long as none of our practice sessions are rained out," Coach Alex said. "We couldn't stand to be forced indoors. That would be the last straw."

The Jacket players have a keen mental outlook for the game. And they have an unblemished record to defend.

Crippled Tech Awaits Navy Undismayed

Drill on Fundamentals
Practically Finishes
Pregame Preparations

A long drill on fundamentals practically finished Georgia Tech's preparations for Saturday's tussle with the mighty Naval Academy, which is slated for 2 o'clock, Atlanta time, on Grant Field.

The Jackets will spend about 30 minutes in "warm up" clothes this afternoon, and then settle back to wait for the opening whistle.

As Coach W. A. Alexander sent his team through yesterday's workout, he had one eye peeled on the training quarters, for the report from there will have a lot to do with Tech's chances of victory.

Three starters and three other valuable reserves are on the ailing list at The Flats, and two of the first stringers may not get into the game at all. One other, the captain and brilliant end, Phil Tinsley, is a doubtful starter and will be handicapped by a painful knee injury if he ever gets into the game.

Tackle Rollo Phillips and Guard Luke Bowen have sprained ankles and have not participated in any of the rough drills this week. Coach Alexander isn't counting on their services at all, though it is possible they can get in the game.

Trainers Claude Bond and "Sandy" Sandlin are working overtime in an effort to get the boys ready.

The situation at blocking back is the most serious of all. First-stringer Charley Helzer is ready to go, but his first and second placements are ailing. Joe Balser has a sprained ankle, and Jack Nixon has an infected foot that has kept him out of uniform the entire week.

But with all the luck so far against them, the Jackets are in fine spirits for the naval invasion. The odds are against them, but they don't believe they can be licked until somebody shows them.

So far Tech is undefeated, unscored on. Three teams have fallen by the wayside. Navy lost to the North Carolina Preflight in the first game of the season, but has come back to whip two clubs, including Duke. All in all, the game promises to be a thriller, and the issue won't be settled until the last whistle has blown.

Navy Eleven Set To Shoot Works Here

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 19.—The U. S. Naval Academy football squad will go "all out" against Georgia Tech in Atlanta Saturday. That was the word from Cmdr. Oscar (Swede) Hagberg, head coach, today as the players tapered off for the battle.

A squad of 45 will make the trip, leaving late tomorrow afternoon. It will be the first invasion of Navy athletes deep into Dixie for any sport competition.

There is keen dissatisfaction over the showing of the team thus far, although undefeated by a collegiate opponent, and that is why the Middles will be expected to pull everything they have.

The gridiron powers want a real demonstration of the potential strength of the most formidable group ever assembled at Annapolis.

During the week reports of a big shakeup, particularly in the backfield, have been current, although the tentative lineup announced tonight is practically the same as that which started previous games. There are met in the array of 25 backs hitherto relegated to secondary consideration who have made impressive showings whenever called upon. Notable instances are the veteran Hal Hamberg, and Ralph Ellsworth, plebe who made a reputation at Texas University.

The probable lineup is: Ends, Bramlett and Ben Martin; tackles, Whitmore and Gilliam; guards, Drame and Ben Chase, captain; center, Jack Marist; quarterback, Dunn or Barkley; left half, Jenkins or Hamberg; right half, Barron Ellsworth or Pettit; full, Sullivan or Scott.

Sell-Out Crowd For Vol-Tide Tilt

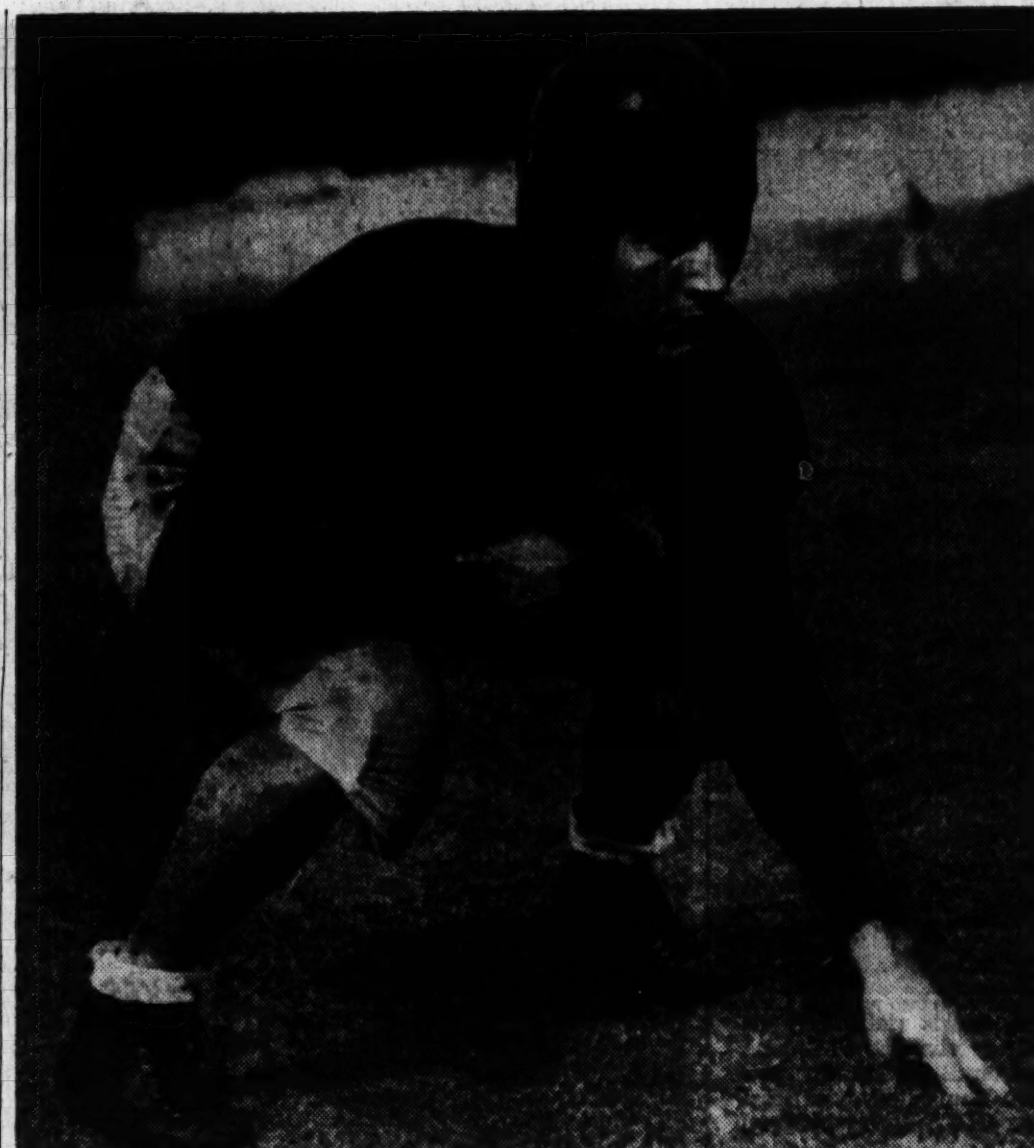

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 19.—(AP)—The University of Tennessee went through its last rough workout today before playing host to Alabama here Saturday, and Coach John Barnhill kept a dubious eye cocked at a cloudy sky.

Rain Saturday might take the edge off the Crimson Tide's famed passing attack, but the same rain would also slow fleet-footed Buster Stephens, Vol back who's been good for many a long touchdown romp.

All the squad except starting Tackle Mike Pardous, troubled by a knee hurt in scrimmage last week, are in good shape for the game.

The prospect of rain did nothing to slow ticket sales however, and a sell-out crowd of 30,000 is in view.

Boxing and Wrestling TONIGHT 8:30 P. M. AUDITORIUM

SMALL BUT TOUGH—Maurice Furchgott weighs only 165 pounds, but he has been playing a lot of right guard for Coach Bill Alexander's Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets. He is expected to be one of the main stumbling blocks in the Jacket line when they tackle Navy's high-powered eleven Saturday afternoon at Grant field. Maurice prepped at Boys' High, where he played outstanding ball for Coach Shorty Doyal's Purples.

Purples, Geechie Play Feature Here Tonight

Boys' High's powerful eleven will be seeking its seventh straight victory of the season at 8 o'clock tonight at Ponce de Leon Park, where Coach Chick Shiver's Savannah High Geechie will be their opponents, and at the same time will be keeping an ear cocked towards Macon, where Tech High and Lanier will be locked in mortal combat to determine which will be the prime challenger for the Purple Hurricane's G. I. A. A. crown.

Lanier is known to have a powerhouse in the making, and it will take a lot of fine football on the part of the Smithies if they are to come through with their sixth consecutive triumph.

The record of Coach Stogie Davis' team is just as lily white as is that of the charges of Allen Shi. OTHER GAMES HERE

Meanwhile several other good games are on tap for the home front, shaping up at Decatur where Coach Bill Badgett will send his unbegun but twice tried eleven out to stop the surge of Gainesville's Red Elephants, who are also undefeated and making a mighty bid for the N. G. I. C. championship. Game time is 8 p. m.

Russell High, sporting the leading conference scorer in Jerry Bowen and still having a great chance to win the N. G. I. C. diadem if Gainesville falters, will seek to add another victory at the expense of embattled West Fulton, the defending champs, at 8 p. m. on the Russell field. Commercial and Hapeville will play their game at the same site at 3 p. m. today, with the much improved Typists the probable victor.

Coach Lawrence Whalen's G. M. A. Cadets, getting better each outing, will engage Marion Institute, of Marion, Ala., an unknown quantity, on the G. M. A. grid at 8 p. m. also.

Other elevens from Greater Atlanta will hit the road for their games tonight. Marist will be in Griffin to take on Spalding. North Fulton will tangle with Rome in Rome. Fulton High will journey to Marietta and College Park will vie with Robert E. Lee in Thomaston.

PURPLES FAVORED Boys' High should be able to take Savannah into camp rather handily at Ponce de Leon park, although the Purples probably will suffer a letdown after their great victory over Miami here last Friday. Shorty Doyal's eleven is not supposed to be as good as last year's club, but as far as performance so far is concerned they have been even stronger. The line play was well nigh perfect against the Singarees. The attack was well directed and the razzle dazzle stuff literally sparkled.

One of the sidelight features of the Boys' High-Savannah fracas will be the fact that the two coaches have sons playing in the game. Both the boys have the same tags as their dad's, too. R. L. (Buck) Doyal Jr., is first-string center for the Purples, and it is doubtful if he has a peer at the pivot post in the state. Ivy M. (Chick) Shiver Jr., will be at center for the Geechie if he is sufficiently recovered from a recent injury.

Georgia To Play Fliers Tonight

By F. M. WILLIAMS, Constitution Staff Writer

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 19.—Georgia's Bulldogs, already badly battered after three games, face a massive Daniel Field eleven here Friday night at 8:30 o'clock in the last home game of the season before the Tech clash December 2.

Coach Wallace Butts, whose team has won twice and lost a single game, will not have the services of several of his best players tonight, and as a result the Bulldogs will be on the short end of the betting odds.

Don Wells, regular end, spent yesterday in the infirmary and Bernie Reid, a regular guard, is definitely out of the game with a bad leg.

Adding to the woes of Coach Wallace Butts is the fact that Stan Nestorak, who had been scheduled to fill the shoes of Perl, was called home yesterday due to the death of both his mother and stepfather. His mother died Friday morning and his stepfather Thursday night.

"All we can do is stick in there," Coach Butts said. Daniel Field won an 18-to-7 decision from Georgia a year ago in Augusta.

Minor injuries to star halfback Al Perl will probably keep him on the bench for tonight, especially since the Bulldogs have an all-important Southeastern Conference game with Louisiana State University coming up next week. Perl sprained his ankle against Kentucky last week.

Omar Heim and Larry Bouley, the best fullbacks on the squad, will also be out of the lineup.

Profits Tax Said Out After War

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The excess-profits tax on corporations appears to be headed for the scrap heap after the war, a treasury official said today.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION • Friday, Oct. 20, 1944 • 15

al and treasury postwar tax planners call for keeping the excess-profits tax.

In a speech on corporate tax simplification, prepared for delivery before the American Institute of Accountants, Blough said, "It appears that simplification of the excess-profits tax will come by erosion rather than by erosion."

He said this wartime tax is to blame for the major complexities of the corporation tax structure.

Blough criticized the capital-stock tax and the declared-value excess-profits tax, saying they "have no relation to any accepted principle of tax distribution." He suggested that both taxes "be simplified in the manner urged by the treasury for some years and unambiguously concurred in by business—namely, repeal."

Saving Ourselves as Others See Us!
Excerpt from letter received from one of Lane satisfied customers.
Original on file at Lane Drug Stores
Office.

"I know by experience that LANE is DEPENDABLE . . . and in any estimate of man or business, dependability is most important.

My man is at war—risking his life to give me the privilege of walking on a safe street—to Lane's . . . to buy safe drugs.

My children play war—but my fight against illness is grim and real.
There are no storm troopers—no Gestapo in my town, but germs are Fifth Columnists; and my Lane Store is a sentinel of safety . . . always dependable.

To analyze the question—why I have my prescriptions filled at Lane . . .
I find that they give me 3 things I demand. 1: Potency and freshness in Drug. I've never bought drugs at Lane's that weren't "active," and thru investigation have learned that Lane meets the highest requirements of all drug laws.

2: Careful and safe compounding. Lane employs only druggists of proven ability, high character and pleasing personality. Each prescription is checked for safety.

3: Reasonable cost. Now, when things cost more, and many essential drugs are almost impossible to get, Lane offers me the same high quality—at low prices.

'Jumping Joe' Clifton Comes Tomorrow for Atlanta Visit

"Jumping Joe" Clifton, whose name was given to him, it is said, because he has never been known to sit in a chair for more than 30 seconds at a time, is arriving tomorrow to be the guest of his good friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weinman, at their Biltmore hotel apartment, and to attend the Tech-Navy football game. Atlantans haven't had the opportunity of meeting a more distinguished visitor in a long time, for "Jumping Joe" and his 12th Crack Bomber Torpedo outfit, of which he was commander, are renowned the world over. When at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, "Jumping Joe" was a member of the football squad, so the Saturday contest will be of particular interest to him.

Cmdr. Clifton's friendship with the Weinmans began two years ago when "Jumping Joe" was at the naval base in Miami, Fla., and met their son and daughter, Frances and "Winnie" Gardner, of Columbus, Ohio. It was through the Gardners that the naval hero met his Atlanta hosts.

Cmdr. Clifton's outfit, which is one of the greatest yet to be turned out by the Navy, has a brilliant record. "Jumping Joe" spent 15 months campaigning from Pearl Harbor to Trincomalee with the bomber fighters. The outfit lost only 12 of its planes by enemy action, with three men killed and 20 missing. It destroyed 102 enemy planes, sank 104,500 tons of shipping, and damaged 188,500 tons more.

When Cmdr. Clifton saw his wingman, Lt. Dale Klahn, with whom he had flown 500 hours, go down at sea, he screamed to his men: "He must be saved!" Immediately he gathered his Hellicats together, daringly smashed at shore base artillery, and Lt. Klahn was recovered in a hair-raising rescue by a British submarine.

In June of this year the brave group of heroes (who claim no honors individually but only for their outfit as a whole) were disbursed to new bases and "Jumping Joe" is now safely back in the United States, stationed at the Green Court Naval Station in Florida.

EXCITING PAPER CHASE

More than 40 members of the riding set gathered yesterday at Dr. Upton Munn's in North Fulton Park for a very exciting stable affair. With tallyhoes they mounted and set off across country on a paper chase.

The day before the event town paper had been strewn along the route to a hidden flag and trophy. After the chase a barbecue was held.

Among the socialites present were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Healey, Mrs. L. W. Robert, Mr. and Mrs. William Elsas, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hull, Mrs. Robert H. White Jr., Herbert Oliver, and many others.

MRS. MELTON'S BIRTHDAY

Yesterday marked the 75th birthday anniversary of Mrs. W. F. Melton, wife of Dr. Melton, popular president of the Atlanta Writers' Club, and, as luck would have it, the Writers' Club was holding its monthly dinner meeting on that very day in the banquet hall of the Woman's Club. Two of the club members planned a surprise party for Mrs. Melton and not a syllable leaked out until the lights were turned out and the beautiful birthday cake, bearing 16 lighted candles, was brought in, whereupon the guests sang "Happy Birthday" and presented individual gifts to this beloved Atlanta.

Mrs. Melton is one of Atlanta's most outstanding women. She was born on Stamboul Plantation in Lake Providence, La., the plantation having been used as the locale for Mark Bradford's story, "Old Man Adam and His Children," from which the play "Green Pastures" was made. It was while a student at Peabody Normal College in Nashville that she met Dr. Melton. They were graduated from that institution on the same day with the same degree. Dr. and Mrs. Melton recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They have one son, Quincy Melton, editor-publisher of the Griffin Daily News, and a daughter, Mrs. J. B. McNelly, of Atlanta. Mrs. Melton is a past president of the Atlanta Woman's Club, charter member and first president of the Ladies' Burns Club, past president of the Service Star Legion, and past president of the Emory Woman's Club. She has written many short stories and poems, some of which have been set to music.

Mrs. Hansell To Entertain Y. W. C. A. Advisory Group

The Y. W. C. A. is teeming with plans for its winter activities, with hardly a day passing without a meeting of the executives being held at the "Y" home on Auburn avenue. For instance the executive committee of the board of trustees meets there every Wednesday for lunch to talk over its plans, the group including Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Howard Candler, Mrs. J. N. McEachern, Bolling Jones, Fred Patterson and Guy Woolford.

A recent innovation is an advisory committee appointed by the president, Mrs. Granger Hansell, and composed of prominent Atlanta women not already serving the "Y" in some capacity. Today at 1 o'clock Mrs. Hansell will entertain at a buffet luncheon as the first of a series of affairs honoring this committee and other women who will later join the group. Mrs. Hansell will be assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. K. Ottley and Mrs. Howard Candler. Members of the advisory committee include Mesdames Robert Adamson, Ivan Allen Jr., Hunter

Sigma Deltas Plan Dance Tomorrow

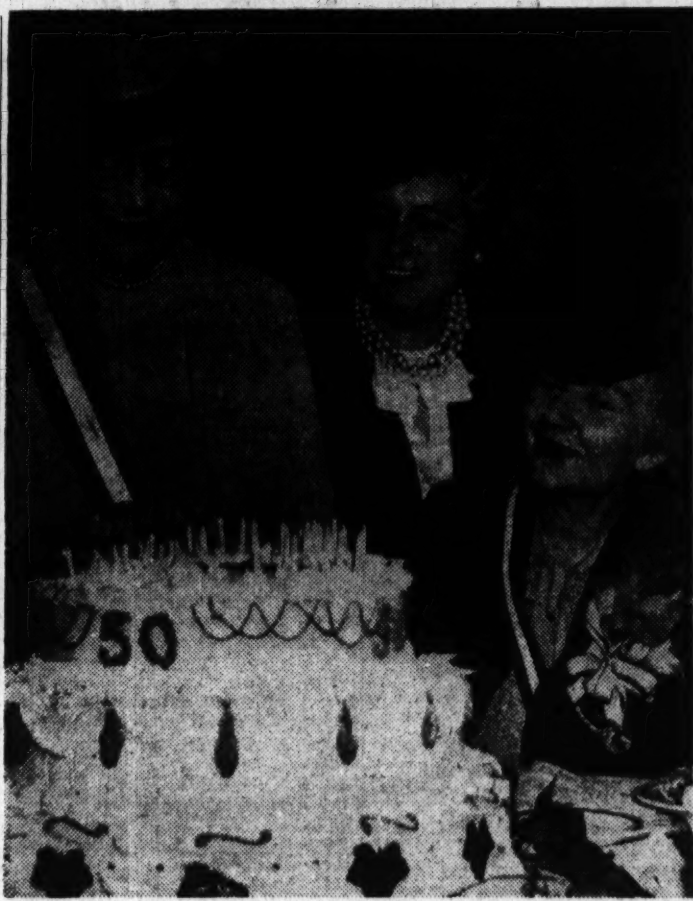

The annual Sigma Delta sorority script dance will be held Saturday evening from 8 to 12 o'clock at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Freshmen members of the sorority will be special guests but will not be allowed to dance until after intermission. Following a tradition of many years standing they will be dressed in yellow and black Dutch costumes.

The chaperons will include Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Johns Jr., Mrs. T. X. Cheves, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Dunn and Mr. and Mrs. Houston Boyet.

Wesleyan Alumnae

Wesleyan Alumnae Club Group No. 2 will meet with Mrs. W. T. Asher, 720 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., Mrs. J. W. Wing co-hostess, Saturday at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. J. W. Wing will review "Jefferson Himself," and Mrs. Asher will discuss "The Curtain Rises," by Reynolds. A current topics quiz will be conducted by Mrs. B. R. Stallings.

Miss Anne Owens Is Honored At Many Prenuptial Parties

Miss Anne Owens, whose marriage to Lt. L. W. Shippey, of Waycross, will be a fashionable social event of November 8, is being extensively entertained prior to her wedding.

Inaugurating the parties was the luncheon at which Mrs. L. L. Foreman entertained recently at her home on West Peachtree drive. Mrs. Hugh Richardson Jr. gave a luncheon yesterday at the Mirador room of the Capital City Club, honoring this popular bride-elect.

Today, Mrs. Thomas Morgan will give a luncheon at her home on Peachtree Battle avenue, and tomorrow, Miss Vee Swanson entertains at luncheon at her home on Cherokee road.

On October 24, Mrs. Lon Grove entertains 18 of Miss Owens' friends at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club. Miss Mary

Red Cross Offers Safety Instruction

The Department of Safety Services of the Atlanta chapter, Red Cross, is undertaking an educational program in the field of accident prevention, designed to reach mothers and homemakers. Such interest has been manifested by these women in studying recent ideas of preventing accidents in both home and farm that the Red Cross is now issuing a call for instructors for the accident prevention classes.

Twenty-five hours of instructor training will be given by the safety services department to volunteers for this work. The qualifications for instructors are that they must be 20 years of age or over, and must be free to teach in the daytime. They will be expected to teach only two hours a day twice a week.

Anyone able to take the instructor training and give their assistance to furthering the Red Cross accident prevention program is urged to call the Atlanta Red Cross, Atwood 1801 at once.

Pledges To Entertain

The pledges of the Beta Phi chapter of Delta Zeta Sorority at Oglethorpe will entertain the actives and their dates at a barbecue today at the home of one of the pledges, Miss Jimmie Anne Carnathan, on Harris trail. The officers of the pledge club in charge of the party are: President, Miss Virginia Gregory, of Donville; vice president, Miss Jimmie Anne Carnathan, of Atlanta; secretary, Miss Helen Liedke, of Atlanta.

The actives have been entertaining the pledges for the past week with a series of parties which include a dinner, a theater party, and a pajama party. Mrs. Louise Riddle is planning to entertain the chapter at her home on Boulevard in the near future.

Historical Society

Mrs. Lola Walker Clement and Mrs. Beulah D. Manston will receive for the Atlanta Historical Society Sunday when the headquarters in the Erlanger Theater building are opened to the public between 3:30 and 6 p. m. Assisting will be Mesdames Emma Calhoun Connally, James A. Erwin Sr., Mary Graham Simmons and Lois W. Yarbrough. Registering the guests will be Mesdames Sarah Ann Bankston and Claire Clement, granddaughters of Mrs. Clement. A special display of items connected with the public schools of Atlanta will be arranged by Mrs. Manston.

Bar Mitzvah To Be Held

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Rich announce the Bar Mitzvah of their son, Joe Sanford Rich, to be held at the Ahavath Achim synagogue at 9 a. m. Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Rich will entertain at an open house on Sunday at their home at 599 E. Morningside drive from 4 until 7 p. m.

Garden Study Club

The Garden Study Club will meet today at 10:30 a. m. with Mrs. John J. Espey, 124 W. Benson street, Mrs. R. A. Walker acting as co-hostess. Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown will be the speaker.

Visitors Feted By Mrs. Ragsdale

Mrs. Clifford Ragsdale entertains today at the Piedmont Driving Club, honoring two outstanding members of the American Red Cross who are her guests, Mrs. R. H. Wilds, of Aiken, S. C., and Mrs. L. B. Fort, of Orlando, Fla., members of the national committee, Camp and Hospital Council Service.

Mrs. Wilds is a cousin of Miss Mabel Boardman, of Washington, D. C., dean of volunteer Red Cross workers in the United States. Mrs. Ragsdale is area director and vice chairman of the National Camp and Hospital Council Service.

Yellow chrysanthemums and autumn foliage will form the centerpiece for the table and cards, hand-painted in yellow birds, will mark the guests' places.

Daughters of 1812 To Give Luncheon For National Head

Invitations have been issued by the Georgia Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, to the luncheon in honor of the president national, Mrs. Lloyd DeWitt Smith, of Michigan, who arrives in Atlanta on October 26 for a two-day visit. The luncheon will take place on Friday, October 27, at the Biltmore hotel at 1 p. m. in Parlor No. Ten.

Reservations may be made with Miss Alberta Malone, 747 Juniper street, N. E., Apartment 2, and must be in writing with check enclosed. Reservations will close on Tuesday, October 24.

The guest artist for the musical program will be Mrs. Julie W. Felton, and her accompanist will be Mrs. Andrew S. Marshall. The president national, Mrs. Smith, will speak on the work of the national society now being done and planned for the immediate future.

Two other honor guests at the luncheon will be the first vice president national, Mrs. Lucius W. McConnell; and the honorary vice president national and president of the Officers National Club, Mrs. Charles F. Rice.

The state executive board will meet on Friday at 10:30 a. m. in Room 6, preceding the luncheon. Presiding at the board meeting and the luncheon will be Miss Helen Estes, of Gainesville, state president of the U. S. D. of 1812.

Miss Dorothy L. Norris Weds War Hero Isaac N. Wingate

MRS. I. N. WINGATE.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy L. Norris daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Norris Sr., of Decatur, to P. O. Isaac Newton Wingate, USN, of St. Petersburg, Fla., took place recently in the chapel of Glenn Memorial Methodist church. Dr. R. H. Hall Jr. performed the ceremony and music was presented by Stillman Gupit and Paul Crutchfield.

Robert J. Hitchcock, uncle of the bride, was best man. The ushers included Gene Norris, brother of the bride, and Jerry Clayton.

Mrs. Henry A. Adams Jr. was matron of honor and the flower girls were Gail Norris, sister of the bride, and her cousin, Sandra Norris.

The lovely bride wore a dress of imported ivory lace over satin. She carried tube roses, white roses and orchids.

After the ceremony a small reception was given at the home of the bride's parents on Maple street in Decatur.

Mr. Wingate is back from the South Pacific theater of war. During a wedding trip he spoke to a large audience of war workers in Providence, R. I., relating some of his experiences in four major naval campaigns. He was on the Vincennes when it sank and was badly wounded, and was in the battles of the Coral Sea and Midway, as well as the invasion of the Solomon Islands.

After the wedding trip the Wingates plan to reside in Newark, N. J., where Mr. Wingate is stationed.

Georgia Tech Presented Ordnance Merit Award

Georgia Tech received the Army Ordnance certificate of merit in ceremonies at Grant field yesterday, and became the first school in the south to earn that award.

The certificate was presented to Tech's president, Col. Blake R. Van Leer, by Maj. C. T. Harris Jr., commandant at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Md., in recognition of the school's outstanding contribution to the development of ordnance.

"Georgia Tech's contribution to the war effort, and to ordnance, has been threefold," Gen. Harris stated. "Graduates of the school's Army ROTC are now holding hundreds of key positions in ordnance. Thus, Tech has contributed personnel."

LABORATORIES PRAISED

"Secondly, Georgia Tech's laboratories have raised the quality of our arms and ammunition," Harris continued, "and thirdly, the research carried on by members of the faculty have contributed to the improvement of our weapons."

Harris stated that the ordnance branch had particularly commended Georgia Tech for experiments with explosives and propellants. The ordnance certificate of merit has been presented only about 20 times, Gen. Harris said, and only 12 times to educational institutions.

The award was acknowledged by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president emeritus of Georgia Tech, under whose administration the school earned the certificate of merit.

"CO-OPERATIVE SPIRIT" "Georgia Tech has always felt and displayed a sincere, co-operative spirit with the military authorities of our country," Dr. Brittain said. "We thank you sincerely for the high honor paid us, and assure you that you can always count upon the Georgia School of Technology to give loyal service to our country at all times."

Following the presentation, the Georgia Tech Navy and Army ROTC units passed in review before Gen. Harris, Maj. Gen. Frederick E. Uhl, commander, Fourth Service Command; Capt. J. V. Babcock, commander of the Tech Naval unit, and Lt. Col. Bird Little, commander of the school's Army ROTC.

Other distinguished guests who attended the ceremony were Capt. P. R. Glutting, director of training for the Sixth Naval district; Col. Oscar Krupp, ordnance officer for the Fourth Service Command, and Lt. H. E. Kenny, director of physical training for the Sixth Naval district.

Sororities Elect Frosh Leaders

Three of the four Panhellenic high school sororities have selected their freshman officers. The Pi Psi will announce their leaders at their annual script dance which will be held next Friday evening.

The Phi Psi selected Miss Mary Haverly as their freshman president, and those who will serve with her include Miss Joan Coart, vice president; Miss Beulah Reeve, secretary; and Miss Helen Hopkins, treasurer.

Miss Corinne Carpenter will be president of the Sigma Delta freshmen, with Miss Sally Freeman, vice president; Miss Jo Lane Cheves, secretary; and Miss Ann Bleakley, treasurer.

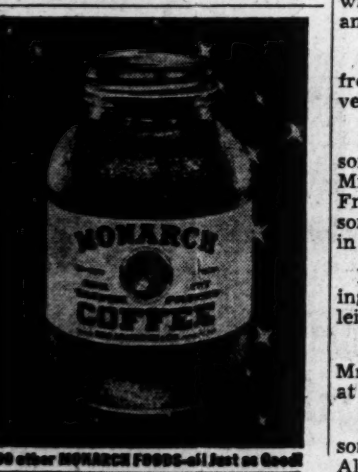

The O. B. X. sorority selected Miss Julianne Hartman as leader. Miss Dot Miller will serve as vice president; Miss Virginia Andrews as secretary-treasurer, and Miss Pat Dunn as sergeant-at-arms.

The Sigma Chi fraternity at Emory university has asked each of the sororities to select two girls from their ranks to be candidates for the "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." The Phi Psi candidates include their president, Miss Julia Pennington and Miss Florence Akers. Pi Psi selected their president, Miss Mildred Broyles, and Miss Joyce Matthews. The Sigma Deltas and O. B. X.'s will announce their candidates later.

Annie Cruse Club Tea

The 30th anniversary of the Annie Cruse Club will be observed by the Annie Cruse circle with a tea Saturday at 2:45 p. m. at the club home, 882 Juniper street, Northeast.

Mrs. Hugh Bancher, president, will give a short history of the club, which was founded in 1914 by the Young Woman's Bible class of the Central Presbyterian church. Other features of the program will include music and readings by Mrs. J. A. Bradshaw and Mrs. C. J. Edmondson.

ROME RESIDENT DECLARES POW-O-LIN PROVED BLESSING IN HIS DISTRESSING CASE

"I Felt So Achy, Sluggish, Worthless, My Job Was Just a Burden," Declares Mr. Meeks, Valued Tubize Corp. Employee.

In these days of all-out production one has to feel pretty good to stand the pace. Praising Pow-o-lin for relief from distress that made his job burdensome, Mr. S. W. Meeks, press operator, Tubize Corp., well-known resident of Route 2, Rome, Ga., declares:

"Just say for me and for the benefit of my friends who may suffer as I did, Pow-o-lin is the best medicine I ever saw. I had gotten to the point where food didn't appeal to me, for after eating I would suffer pain of gas pressure and indigestion. I was almost afraid to eat and felt undernourished and worthless. To top it all, stubborn constipation plagued me so I had to take strong laxatives that weakened and sickened me. The toxic wastes of constipation made me feel achy and sluggish and everything I tried to do seemed to exhaust me. My head ached something terrible and I often lay awake nights wondering, where in the world I could find a medicine to relieve my distress.

"Fortunately, I read of Pow-o-lin and what happy relief it was bringing to so many Georgia sufferers. It proved a blessing to me, the very first bottle bringing me welcome relief from indigestion, gassy bloating and stubborn constipation. It is a real joy to eat what I want, sleep peacefully and get up feeling equal to any task the day may bring. I am relieved of constipation and the resultant suffering that plagued me night and day. I hope all who suffer as I did will read this statement and try Pow-o-lin."

Pow-o-lin is a purely herbal laxative preparation for the relief of distress as plagued Mr. Meeks when due to constipation. Thousands praise it. Pow-o-lin may be obtained at all Jacobs Drug Stores. Caution: Use only as directed.—(adv.)

Allies Strike From Air in Greek Drive

Carrier Planes Take Heavy Toll of Nazi Shipping in Aegean

ROME, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Additional troops and supplies were unloaded today at Piraeus for British and Greek expeditionary forces while the Germans admitted a withdrawal from Thebes, 32 miles northwest of Athens, which is already under Greek government control.

Neither the Allied nor the Greek government communique mentioned any contact with the Germans, last reported withdrawing well north of Athens. The Greek communique said military operations were proceeding "according to plan. The Berlin communique told of the retreat from Thebes.

Allied headquarters disclosed that naval activity against the Germans was continuing, with the Nazi garrison on Santorin island, 70 miles north of Crete, yielding to the British cruiser Ajax, long a nemesis to the Axis foe.

Carrier planes sweeping inland from the Aegean attacked enemy transport in the vicinity of Volos, 35 miles southeast of Larissa, and took a heavy toll of enemy shipping in the Sporades islands northeast of Athens, the naval command said.

Additional blows were struck by H. M. S. Argonaut, which sank an armored craft carrying 200 Germans in the northern Sporades, and by H. M. S. Terzag, which sank a Siebel ferry loaded with enemy equipment.

Naval aircraft took a heavy toll of rail and motor transport in the Volos area, destroying three locomotives and 35 trucks. In addition one locomotive, four armored cars and three barges were damaged.

PLANES ATTACK TRANSPORT Enemy transport in the Volos area was attacked also by planes from a force of escort carriers. They destroyed four armored cars, three ammunition trucks, and 27 other motor vehicles, and damaged an additional 30. These planes also blew up an ammunition ship and set a coastal vessel on fire.

Packed masses of cheering natives greeted Premier George Papandreou and members of his party who returned to Athens yesterday after four years of exile. They assumed control from a committee of three which had ruled since the capital's liberation.

Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage is full of flavory goodness!

RECIPE

Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage with Poached Eggs

1 lb. Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage Links

4 Cloverbloom Eggs

4 slices bread

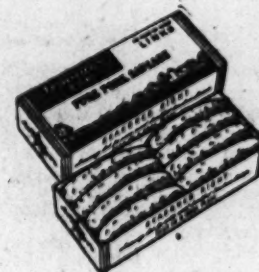

Fill frying pan half full of water and bring to boil. Break eggs in saucer and transfer carefully to water. Do not let water boil after eggs have been added. Cook until whites are firm and yolks have firm over top. Remove and place on toast circles that have been cut out of bread with large cookie cutter. Place on plates with Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage links that have been cooked slowly 12-15 minutes in frying pan, pouring off fat as it accumulates. 4 servings.

Only Carefully Selected Cuts of Pork are Used!

Fine, pure pork, plus the best of imported spices give Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage its extra flavor—for breakfast, lunch or dinner. For your protection it's made fresh every day. Know your family is getting the best—ask for Armour's Star Pure Pork Sausage.

Production Lag Threatens V-Day
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The top WPB officials reported today that shortages in military trucks, tires, bombs, big shells, batteries and one type of tank are jeopardizing a war production program which otherwise is in good shape.
 "This lagging segment is only about 10 per cent of the whole program, but it is a vital 10 per cent," Chairman Krug said at a joint press conference with WPB's chief of operations, H. G. Batchelder. "We must keep the heat on for three or four months more."
 The two joined in asserting that the lag threatens to delay "V-day" in Europe by an indefinite number of months.

 GLORIFY THAT STEW
 Chilly evenings call for hot food chock-full of nourishment. Nothing fills this order better than a tasty meat and vegetable stew. The good lean non-fatigued beef which is so plentiful these days makes delicious, tender, easy-to-make stews. When there is time to glorify the stew, transfer it to a casserole, top with pastry or baking powder biscuits and bake. Result: a dish attractive enough for a company dinner... inexpensive enough for everyday use.

Delicious Stew + Pastry Topping—Meat Pie for Company
 1 lb. lean beef 1/4 cup water
 1/4 cup Advance Shortening 1 tsp. Wilson's B-V
 3 cups water
 1 cup diced potatoes
 1 cup sliced celery
 1 cup peas
 1 tsp. grated onion
 6 tbsp. flour
 Pastry, made with:
 1/4 cup flour
 1/4 cup Advance Shortening
 1/4 tsp. salt
 Cut meat into inch cubes, brown in the hot Advance Shortening, add water and simmer 1 1/2 hours or until meat is tender. Add vegetables and continue cooking until just tender. Measure liquid, add water to make up to 3 cups and thicken with a paste made of the flour and water. Add B-V which has been dissolved in a small amount of the hot gravy. Add meat and vegetables, mix carefully and transfer to a casserole. Top with pastry and bake in a hot oven, 425° F., for 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 6.
 *Left-over cooked meat and vegetables may be combined with left-over gravy or B-V gravy to make this meat pie; or you may use left-over stew.

A WINDOW FOR PEEKING
 A "window" was made on this meat pie so you could see the good meat, vegetable and gravy filling. For home use it's easier to cover the whole top of the pie with pastry, cutting a design in the top to allow steam to escape. Make the pastry rich and flaky by using Advance Shortening. And roll it thin if you want your pie to be praised.
 Nice thing about a meat pie... you can make the stew the day before; quickly cover with pastry when you come home from work or Red Cross meeting, slide it into the oven and, presto, it's baked by the time the salad's made and the table's ready. If you make pastry mix to keep on hand, it's a simple task.
 To make your own Pastry Mix: Sift together thoroughly, 6 cups flour, 2 tsp. salt and 1 tsp. baking powder (optional). Add 1 cup Advance Shortening and cut in very finely until flour resembles corn meal. Add another 1 cup Advance Shortening and cut in very coarsely, until pieces are the size of large peas. Store in a covered container. Need not be kept in refrigerator.
 To use: simply sprinkle pastry mix with cold water (about 2 to 2 1/2 cups, water per cup of mix) and finish in the regular manner.
For a Hearty Dinner
 Let the meat pie "share the heat" of the oven with baking powder biscuits. To complete the menu, serve a sweet-sour beef and cabbage salad and a good old-fashioned jelly roll for dessert.
 Yours for good eating,
 George Rector

Allies Moving On Key City Of Po Valley

ROME, Oct. 19.—(UP)—Three Allied columns moved against the Po valley industrial city of Cesena today, while to the west American troops carved a path through the foothills of the Apennines to within nine miles of Bologna and Negro troops of the 92d Division captured a mountain position along the Ligurian coast near Massa. Although German troops continued to fight desperately, spurred into stubborn resistance by threats of reprisals against their families, a steady deterioration of enemy resistance was noted on most fronts, particularly in the Cesena area. However, farther to the west enemy artillery action increased markedly. A German noncommissioned officer, headquarters here reported, told his Eighth Army captors that the terrific Allied artillery fire on German positions had been "very demoralizing" to the Nazis, and that many of the troops would desert if provided a "safe opportunity."

Canadian advance units, moving up the Po valley a half-mile north of the valley's main railway line, forced the Pisciarello river and established a bridgehead a mile and a half from Cesena. On the right flank New Zealand troops advanced from Marcerone and cleared the village of Ruffio, three miles east of Cesena, and to the south Eighth Army forces continued their drive through the peaks of the coastal mountain range to approach Cellinard, one mile south of the valley city. Indian troops reached the Savio river and cleared Roverano, four miles south of Cesena. Two miles to the north other Indian troops captured Acquarola.

Fulton Schools To Be Improved At $500,000 Cost

War's end will find the Fulton county school system ready to build extensions to 10 schools at a cost of approximately $500,000.

Jere. A. Wells, superintendent, says. A $325,000 fund is now ready to spark the program and detailed architectural drawings have been completed. Wells announced yesterday after bond buyers paid the highest premium ever allowed for local bonds. A premium of $25,625 was paid for the $250,000 bonds sold, and the old securities voted in 1940 and bearing 2 1/2 per cent interest will not cost that much. Because of the premium payment, interest will be reduced to 1.25 per cent.

Voters of the county authorized issuance of $750,000 worth of bonds in 1940, but advent of the war and the scarcity of materials forced postponement of some of the projects. Approximately $50,000 of the $500,000 sold early after the issue was authorized has never been spent, and Wells said yesterday that available school funds will be near the $325,000 mark, and anticipated federal aid on
